Up to six inches more rain is predicted as Hurricane Doreen passes over valley

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

Tropical storm Doreen, although downgraded to a tropical depression by the National Weather Service, is expected to dump up to six inches of record-setting rains tonight and Thursday as she moves northward through Southern California.

The current local rainfall record was set for August 32 years ago by a tropical storm which followed the same path up the California coast as taken by Doreen.

On Aug. 18 and 19, 1945, the storm brough 1.21 inches of warm rain to the local area.

That storm was given a small amount of space on Page 1 of the Progress Bulletin because the minds of local area residents were on the ending of World War II.

Doreen up to 8 a.m. today had left 1.2 inches in Diamond Bar, and the measuring station at Cal Poly Pomona logged 1.17 inches.

But the unusual August storm has caused little major damage in the local area, compared to that sustained in the Imperial Valley.

The heavy rainfall flooded streets and caused many fender-benders on streets and highways, but all were reported as non-injury.

In the Chino area, arcing wires, transformer fires and pole fires were reported by Southern California Edison Co.

Chino Airport power was blacked out for 15 to 20 minutes between 4 and 4:30 p.m.

In Los Serranos, trees were reported down because of the heaviest August storm ever to hit the area.

According to Charles McDaniel, Pomona area representative for the Edison Co., there were 35 cases of petty trouble, a small amount when compared to the number of customers in the area.

McDaniel said that an electrical circuit was out in the La Verne area for up to 15 minutes Tuesday when strong winds blacked out service for 900 customers.

Jack King, public affairs representative for General Telephone, said that the company has received a 25 to 30 per cent increase in trouble reports from customers, but that the troubles are at the homes of customers, and not in the firm's underground cables.

"Otherwise, it is business as usual for us," King said.

Concorde landing OK in N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey was ordered today by a federal judge to allow the supersonic Concorde jet to land at Kennedy Airport.

U.S. District Judge Milton J. Pollack enjoined the Port Authority, which operates New York-area airports, from continuing its ban against the British and French supersonic jet. He said the plane must be allowed to land at Kennedy based on noise rules now in effect for all other jets.

Pollack said his decision will not take effect for 10 days, to allow time for appeal.

He said the Port Authority's 17-month delay in ruling on whether the Concorde could land here was "excessive and unjustified" and that the ban was "discriminatory, arbitrary and unreasonable."

Because the Port Authority has refused to make a decision on the Concorde, Pollack ruled that the plane "thereby has been deprived of an opportunity to show that it is environmentally acceptable at this international airport."

FBI nominee a 'hillbilly trial lawyer'

FRANK JOHNSON

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Frank Johnson, the federal judge expected to be President Carter's choice to take over the FBI, once called himself a "conservative, hillbilly trial lawyer . . with no liberal propensities."

But Johnson, who in 1955 at 37 was the youngest man ever appointed to the federal bench, became a pioneer in civil rights litigation, issuing orders to desegregate schools and public facilities and to protect black voting rights, jury rights and employment rights.

He once so enraged Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace that the governor urged him to "take a barbed-wire enema." Wallace's comment was prompted by what he considered encroachment by Johnson's courts in state matters — reform of the state prison system as well as the integration of the University of Alabama and improvements in care in state mental institutions.

Despite their disagreements, Wallace, who was Johnson's classmate at the University of Alabama, wished him well in his new career.

"We have had our differences," the governor said in a statement, "but I never considered them personal. He is a hard worker and I wish him the greatest of success in this new undertaking and in behalf of the people of our country."

Johnson, a 58-year-old Republican in a state dominated by Democrats, has said that when a state fails to comply with the law, "the federal courts are compelled to enforce it."

In 1956, he joined in the ruling that declared Montgomery's bus segregation unconstitutional. The ruling ended the year-long 0us boycott, led by an obscure young black minister, the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

In recent years, his reform orders for state mental hospitals and prisons earned him a reputation as the "real governor of Alabama."

The attorneys who practice in his court describe the slender, stern-faced judge as "tough as hell, but fair." Johnson once heard that description, and replied, "I'll stand on that."

He has braved threats, derisive mail, cross burnings on his lawn and a 1967 bombing of his mother's Montgomery home as a result of his rulings. Consequently, he has walled himself off from part of society with an around-the-clock guard, an unlisted telephone number and two Great Danes.

A reclusive man by choice, Johnson says he and his wife, Ruth, enjoy evenings and outings with a small, close circle of friends "but we both put social life in the proper perspective."

He golfs occasionally, does carpentry work at home and enjoys Gulf Coast fishing with courtroom intimates.

A firm believer in law and order, Johnson has said that no one has an individual right to determine which laws he obeys and which he violates "unless he is willing to pay the penalty, the penalty meted out by courts of competent jurisdiction."

But with that, he said, government "must be responsive" to the rights of the people to take their claims into court, not to the street, to have them determined "on their merits."

Cocksure as a strutting rooster; twice as proud

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Suddenly a generation feels old. Elvis, the slick-haired, sneering-lipped, slinky-hipped king of their teen-age rock 'n' roll dreams is dead.

It is enough to say Elvis; just as it was enough to say Ike, the fellow in the White House when the king claimed his throne.

His hips twisted, his body shook, he had a way of looking at you sideways, with his chin pulled in, that said more than his curling lips could. He was as cock-sure as a strutting rooster and twice as proud; as proud and as certain as his adolescent fans longed to be.

From the tips of his blue suede shoes to top of that 40-weight oil hairdo, he was the most. That's what they said in those days. "The most."

Ducktails were as common as Elvis fan clubs. Kids who hoped to go to Harvard tried to speak with the inflection of the sons of Mississippi dirt farmers — just like he did.

That didn't worry the parents so much. It was the sex that concerned them. That's what Presley was about. Sex. He brought it out into the open. He took the raunchy back beat of the black blues and made it top 40 fare — with just enough whitewash to give it the patina of respectability.

There's a red-haired woman with two children, a woman who'll be 30 this year and who used to watch Elvis play pickup football on a grade school playground in her Memphis neighborhood.

When she heard the news Tuesday night all she could say was, "Who? Who? Who?" Her voice rose with each question, as if the news would change. A part of her — a blushing, rubbernecking, gosh-and-golly schoolgirl memory — seemed strangely more distant.

She used to hang on the gate of Graceland mansion, hoping for just a peek of Elvis. "Just waiting to see a glimpse of the king," she said. "And I did. A couple of times. In my mind he was unapproachable. My gosh, he was a star. No, he wasn't just a star. I just felt giddy, you know how 13-year-old girls do. What girl just didn't feel tingly all over the place just thinking about him?"

Some of her peers remember having their first really serious fight with their parents over Elvis. There was one night in particular, a Sunday evening back in 1956, when Ed Sullivan gave the nation its first look at its newest bad boy. Families fought at dinner tables over whether children could watch the show.

The tube was going to bring a kid with a sassy Southern drawl and swivel hips who needed a haircut to life in their living rooms. From the looks of him, he didn't care a broken-guitar string for what the parents thought and the kids loved him for that.

There were so many screaming bobby-soxers in Sullivan's studio audience that nearly no one in TV land could hear Elvis' voice through the din. Didn't Sullivan say something to them about being quiet? And remember that girl in the long dark skirt who stood up in the aisle and fainted?

"Love me tender, love me sweet, never let me go. You have made my life complete, and I love you so." The kids didn't have to have that explained to them.

He was the king. The king is dead. And a generation suddenly feels old.

Flood victim last year, too

It's a rerun for Ocotillo

STALLED IN RAIN

A Palm Springs motorist inspects his car in the downtown area after the resort had over two inches of rain Tuesday. The community does not have a drainage system, and depends on the flooding to drain off in the surrounding desert sand bordering the city.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One year ago, the desert town of Ocotillo was nearly wiped out by flooding from a dying hurricane. Today, some residents had to pack their bags again as another tropical storm drenched Southern California.

"Some people in the low areas who have not moved since the last rain are being moved out," said sheriff's Lt. Mike Schneewind Tuesday night. "The whole county's under water."

Persons evacuated from Ocotillo were taken to the Imperial County Fair Grounds in Imperial 30 miles away and to nearby motels, Schneewind said.

A spokesman at the Ocotillo Volunteer Fire Department said at least 50 of the town's 300 residents were voluntarily evacuated Tuesday night. Schneewind said the total was 200.

Tropical Storm Doreen's remnants were forecast to head from the ocean off Baja California to near Los Angeles today. The National Weather Service said rain, often locally heavy with thunderstorms, was expected in the coastal, mountain and desert areas for most of Southern California.

Moisture from Doreen produced heavy rains beginning Monday afternoon in the deserts, particularly in Imperial and San Bernardino counties. Many highways and crops were flooded or washed away, but no injuries were reported.

Some weather observers noted that all the rain was falling in desert areas where it was not wanted, rather than in the fire-ravaged and droughtparched northern areas where it was desperately desired.

Ocotillo residents, particularly, did not welcome the moisture's return. At least six persons were killed last Sept. 11 when torrential rains from Tropical Storm Kathleen poured down dry washes where residents, mostly retired persons, had built houses and trailers believing a flood would never occur. Twenty homes were destroyed and 70 badly damaged.

Much of the town, on the San Diego County line a few miles north of the Mexican border, is built in "a ravine, a natural flood plain," said an Imperial County sheriff's deputy.

Imperial County, the southeasternmost in California, was covered with muddy water from the storm.

"We have 450,000 acres under agriculture in this county and all of that one way or another has received some sort of damage," said Russell Chandler, county assistant chief of emergency services.

Other flooding was reported near the Salton Sea at Niland, where the Highline Canal cracked and water covered several mobile homes.

To the north in Santa Barbara, where a brush fire damaged or destroyed 250 homes and denuded hillsides last month, the fire department warned that rains could start mudslides because "there's no roots holding the vegetation."

However, no rain had fallen in Santa Barbara by Tuesday night.

Jim Hammond, an NWS forecaster, said it was unusual for tropical storms to stay inland this far north instead of being blown out to sea.

"Occasionally, however, there are strong winds aloft blowing almost directly from the south or southeast. When this happens, the tropical storms are pushed right up the coast," he said.

Weather may hamper fire efforts

By The Associated Press

The 16-day-old Marble-Cone fire, having already devastated more than 260 square miles of Los Padres National Forest and adjacent private property, has slowed its pace but the weather could pose big problems.

"This is one of the best chances we've had at containing it," Jim Rice, fire information officer, said Tuesday. "But nothing's positive in this business."

The 4,700 men and women fighting the stubborn blaze in rugged terrain near the Central California coast were buoyed by light winds and low humidity Tuesday and the flames seemed to lose much of their gusto.

But the last remnants of Hurricane Doreen, which had drenched Southern California before beginning to break up, was headed north. The National Weather Service said there could be light winds and drizzles or high winds and lightning.

The fire, third largest in California history, is 60 per cent contained but there was still a viable threat to the community of Carmel Valley.

There were no immediate plans to evacuate the town although officials have raised the possibility if winds shift.

Using bulldozers, fire fighters cut a half-mile swath between the town and the approaching fire, which was expected to reach the fire line sometime today.

Meanwhile, two blazes burning along the Salmon River in Northern California, one in Klamath National Forest and one near the Humboldt and Siskyou county lines, were pushed together by fast winds.

Diamond Bar school site considered

The Pomona school board is expected to consider the selection of a final site for the Diamond Bar high school and the award of bid for porschool and the award of bid for portable classrooms for the upcoming school year at a special meeting today at 7:30 p.m. in the Education Center board room, 800 S. Garey Ave., Pomona.

increases for both certificated and classified employes in specially funded programs and will consider the nomination of three candidates to the city's Parks and Recreation Commission.

The board had previously limited the site selection for the Diamond Bar high school to two sites, one on Mission Boulevard in the northern end of the Phillips Ranch development in the Pomona city limits and the other in Diamond Bar at the northeast corner of Golden Springs Road and the Pomona Freeway. Preliminary information indicates the board may go with the Diamond Bar site due to lower development costs.

The award of contract for portable classrooms may draw discussion from trustees this evening when they compare the overall purchase price for the 33 relocatables to the cost of permanent structures.

The administration is expected to propose a seven-year lease-purchase for the 33 buildings at a cost of $213,799 per year. Total cost would then be nearly $1.5 million.

The board will also appoint the principals for Lincoln, Kellogg and Hamilton elementary schools for the coming year. The three principals already selected are Pat Ramp, Sam Tharpe and Julian Villasenor.

State briefs

Allaway found guilty

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Former janitor Edward Charles Allaway has been found guilty of murdering seven people in a shooting rampage last year in a college library.

The seven-woman, five-man jury found the 37-year-old Allaway guilty Tuesday of six counts of first-degree murder, one of second-degree murder and two of assault with a deadly weapon.

Allaway now faces the sanity phase of the trial, which begins Monday in Superior Court.

Witnesses said Allaway charged into the Instructional Media Center on July 12, 1976, carrying a .22-caliber rifle and screaming that he was going to "get even" with his co-workers whom he believed were responsible for his marital problems. His 23-year-old estranged wife, Bonnie, had filed for divorce a few days before.

Allaway, who had worked as a janitor at the library instructional center, called police from the nearby Hilton Inn to turn himself in after phoning his wife to tell her "it was his last day to live," authorities said.

Allaway, represented by Deputy Public Defender Ron Butler, had pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the charges during the first phase of the murder trial.

Narcotics in prison

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's prisons chief, J.J. Enomoto, says his department is zeroing in on the growing problem of narcotics.

Enomoto, director of the Department of Corrections, said Tuesday the problem "has increased significantly" recently, but the increase consists mostly of marijuana, while violations involving hard drugs remain steady.

He said narcotics are typically smuggled into the prisons by visitors in very small quantities. But they're often at the base of violent incidents.

Figures by department spokesman Phil Guthrie show that among 21,000 prisoners in the 12 institutions during 1975, there were 427 discoveries of narcotics on prisoners, and in only 11 months of 1976 there were 727.

Said Enomoto, "My top priority is violence, and to the extent that narcotics is related to violence, it's a top concern."

Six months ago, a narcotics task force was set up. Three weeks ago it made 26 specific recommendations for curbing the traffic.

The task force co-chairmen, San Quentin Warden George Sumner and Folsom Warden Paul Morris, said some recommendations have already gone into effect.

Others require public hearings: The first is scheduled for Thursday in Sacramento.

Energy commissioner

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A senator backing the confirmation of a state energy commissioner challenges any senator who hasn't driven his state car to the supermarket to cast the first vote against Ronald Doctor.

The Senate Rules Committee, at the request of the Brown administration, decided Tuesday to schedule Doctor's confirmation hearing for Aug. 30.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. early this year reappointed Doctor to a five-year term on the commission on which Doctor has served 2½ years. Then an anonymous letter charged Doctor with misusing his state car and filing exorbitant expense claims.

The Rules Committee refused to bring Doctor up for a vote on whether to recommend confirmation. Brown ordered an audit that found no improper expenses, but the governor took away Doctor's full-time car privilege.

Sen. Jerry Smith, D-Saratoga, said he had been asked by a member of the governor's staff to put Doctor on the agenda.

Sen. Nicholas Petris, D-Oakland, another Rules Committee member, said if the Senate challenges Doctor, "I intend to say, the first senator who has never driven his car to the supermarket can cast the first vote against him."

Organized crime in porn

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Organized crime is staying away from involvement in child pornography but is busy "making millions" in adult pornography, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger says.

At a news conference Tuesday, Younger said: "I don't think there's any question that organized crime has pretty well taken over the pornography industry."

"But interestingly enough, they don't seem to be too anxious to get into the child porn business. They're making millions off things like 'Deep Throat' and so forth, and I don't think they want anybody to rock the boat," Younger added.

According to Younger, organized crime "never had it so good. They're selling a commodity which for all practical purposes is a legal commodity. So I think they — except for some of the unusually greedy ones — want to let it be."

Asked about his comment linking the film "Deep Throat" to organized crime, Younger first said, "Let's strike the 'Deep Throat'."

But he continued that most pornography produced in Southern California is linked to organized crime and added, "I would suspect that they're not going to let anything that sells as many tickets as that one does (Deep Throat) get past them."

A Younger aide said there is no evidence linking producers or distributors of 'Deep Throat' to organized crime, but that some theaters which are showing it are linked.

Lake Powell swim

John de la Cruz, 47, of Pico Rivera, covered 30 miles of the 200-mile northern Arizona lake during his first day Monday. Distances and the isolation of the area made communications with de la Cruz difficult.

The National Park Service said de la Cruz was reported to be in good condition and was optimistic he would complete the swim by Saturday. A spokesman said the marathon swimmer had reached Mokee Canyon Tuesday and planned to arrive at Hall's Crossing early in the evening. However, officials at the crossing had no word of De La Cruz by midevening and said communications would be out until Wednesday morning.

De la Cruz, an aquatic contractor, suffered a broken vertebra 12 years ago in an industrial accident and last year was injured when he received a gunshot wound on a camping trip.

Grillo retirement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Disability retirement has been recommended for controversial Municipal Court Judge Joseph Grillo, the first judge ever censured by the county's Bar Association.

The action was recommended by the California Commission on Judicial Performance and is awaiting a ruling by Chief Justice Rose Bird, officials said Tuesday.

Grillo, who requested the disability ruling, is suffering from diabetes, heart problems, partial blindness in one eye, hearing impairment, vertigo and arthritis, doctors have said.

Presley fans mourn their king

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Fans of yesterday and today, old and young, teenyboppers and their middle-aged mothers, gathered today on Elvis Presley's doorstep, not to scream and cheer but to mourn. Their king is dead.

Elvis Aron Presley, the Mississippi truck driver whose hip-grinding performance style helped launch the sexual revolution as he became America's greatest king of rock 'n' roll, died Tuesday afternoon of a heart ailment. He was 42.

A crowd of more than 200 mourners had gathered by mid-morning outside the gates of Graceland mansion, where Presley's body was to be on public view from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. today in a special solid seamless copper and steel casket.

Jim Stewart, night supervisor at the Memphis Funeral Home where the body was taken after Presley died, said the casket was similar to the one the singer chose for his mother when she died in 1958.

"We don't even keep this casket in stock. They are very expensive," Stewart said, adding it had been flown in from Oklahoma City late Tuesday night.

Outside the mansion, a special police security detail was assigned to direct traffic and keep watch over the crowd, which ranged from young children and teen-agers to people in their 40s and 50s.

At one point during the night, the gates opened, several cars came out, and the crowd swarmed around taking pictures and trying to get autographs. One of the cars carried Vester Presley, an uncle who was chief of security, and his wife.

Vester Presley said Elvis' former wife, Priscilla, whom he divorced in 1973, arrived at the mansion at about 3 a.m.

"She is taking it hard. She is in a total state of shock," he said.

Stewart said the switchboard at the funeral home received calls from all 50 states and from as far away as Guam and Johannesburg, South Africa.

"Everybody wanted to know where to send flowers," Stewart said.

Vester Presley said the decision to open the casket to public view was made by the singer's father, Vernon Presley.

Dr. George Nichopoulos, longtime physician to the swivelhipped, throaty baritone who was known as the "King of Rock 'n' Roll," said an autopsy revealed a constriction in one of the main arteries to the heart, which restricted blood flow and brought on a heart attack.

"What caused it? Any one of a number of things," he said.

Nichopoulos said his patient, who carried about 175 pounds on a six-foot frame as a young man but recently had been reported grossly overweight, had been taking a number of appetite depressants, but did not have a drug problem.

Dr. Jerry Francisco, the Shelby County medical examiner, discounted rumors that Presley, who had been a virtual recluse at his white-columned Graceland mansion for 20 years, had suffered from a drug problem.

"There was no indication of drug abuse at all," Francisco said. "I was aware of the rumors and that is why I mention it."

Delbert "Sonny" West, who was a Presley bodyguard for 16 years, said in Chicago just hours before Presley died that the singer was heavily addicted to drugs and haunted by fears that drove him into seclusion.

West was interviewed by Chicago Sun-Times columnist Bob Greene about the recently released book, "Elvis: What Happened?" that West and two other former bodyguards have written about Presley.

"He was on pills all day long, and he would give himself shots in the arm or the leg with those little plastic syringes," West said in the interview. "He would have us give him shots in the rear end. We prayed for this man many times. His drug habit is so severe that I'm convinced he is in danger of losing his life."

Presley, whose recording of "Heartbreak Hotel" helped to put him on top of the entertainment world 21 years ago, was discovered unconscious at Graceland in suburban Memphis on Tuesday.

Presley was found dressed in pajamas and lying face-up in the red-carpeted bathroom next to his second-floor bedroom.

He was taken to Baptist Hospital in a Fire Department ambulance while Nichopoulos and emergency medical technicians worked to revive him.

"Come on Presley, breathe. Breathe for me," Nichopoulos implored repeatedly as the ambulance sped to the hospital.

But he added, "We knew he was probably dead when he left the house."

The doctor said attempts to revive Presley, who appeared in 31 films — including "Love Me Tender," "GI Blues," and "Jailhouse Rock," continued because of a slight chance life still existed in his body.

"The reason we continued to resuscitate him was his pupils were constricted," the doctor said at a hospital news conference after an autopsy. "Usually in death, there's not enough oxygen and the pupils dilate."

"Heartbreak Hotel," the first hit for Presley, was released in January 1956. It was one of 45 records that sold more than one million copies, including "Hound Dog," "All Shook Up" and "It's Now Or Never."

Booming record sales and overflowing audiences at personal appearances made the entertainer who combined country-western, gospel and rhythm and blues one of the world's wealthiest entertainers.

Presley had played racquetball at his private court until almost 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Word of Presley's death swept across this city where he had lived since leaving his birthplace, Tupelo, Miss., at the age of 13.

Mayor Wyeth Chandler ordered flags in the city lowered to half-staff in memory of Presley.

White House deluged with Presley callers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Callers swamped the White House switchboard today urging that President Carter declare a national day of mourning for rock 'n' roll star Elvis Presley, White House telephone operators said.

A California couple sent a telegram scolding the President for not issuing a statement on the singer's death.

"No death has moved the American people so much since that of John Fitzgerald Kennedy," the telegram said.

Government employes to stay in S.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government says it is succeeding in its drive to keep public employes under the Social Security System.

Nearly 500,000 public employes had threatened to leave the system, including almost 400,000 who work for New York City.

Now, however, programs representing all but two of those employes will continue under the financially troubled system.

Officials in New York cited as reasons for their reversal strong union opposition to the move and an advisory report that the city would get inferior benefits from other pension plans.

In the last several months, governmental units in 12 states have given the mandatory two-year notice of leaving the system, which is required for employes in private industry but is voluntary for state and local government workers.

Contributions to Social Security, shown on paycheck stubs under "FICA," help finance retirement checks, disability insurance, survivors' benefits for spouses and children and Medicare health insurance.

New York, close to bankruptcy, based its original decision to cancel on the millions of dollars in matching contributions it would save each quarter. The slumping economy appeared to be behind other defections.

Then, Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell moved to halt the dropouts, concerned about the potential loss of $9.2 billion in contributions from state and local governments and their employes.

He maintained that those quitting the program would be less well off under private plans and could lose future benefits under the program.

Now, besides New York City, governmental units in California, Alaska, Colorado, Georgia, Texas, Maine and Washington have renounced their intention to leave the program.

Not sure how far to go with support

Ford backs Panama Canal treaty

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford says he supports the proposed new Panama Canal treaty but that he is undecided how much more he will do to help President Carter obtain Senate ratification.

"I'm absolutely convinced that it's in the national interest of the United States that the two treaties be approved," Ford told reporters Tuesday following a lengthy briefing on the pact at his vacation retreat here in the Colorado Rockies.

"I'm convinced that this is an important step forward and follows the guidelines that were used by my administration," Ford said.

One agreement would turn control of the American-built waterway to Panama at the end of the century, while the other would ensure the neutrality of the canal thereafter.

Pushing the proposal through the Senate will be "a tough battle," Ford predicted, while advising Carter to send it to Capitol Hill for review as soon as possible and urging prompt Senate approval.

Asked if he would try to rally Republican support for the agreement, Ford said, "I will do what I can appropriately and properly to achieve that end. I hope my endorsement today will be helpful. How much more I'll do, I really haven't decided."

Ford's support of the pact was welcomed by Carter, who is vacationing at Camp David, Md.

Carter thanked Ford "for this example of bipartisan support on a question so clearly important to our national interest and security."

In Washington on Tuesday, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said he is prepared to give his unqualified support for the canal treaties.

Kissinger announced his support after a meeting with his successor Cyrus R. Vance and a previous meeting with U.S. treaty negotiator Ellsworth Bunker and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. David C. Jones.

Kissinger had said after meeting with Carter on Monday that he was inclined to support the proposed treaties, but withheld his unconditional backing until he learned more about their contents.

Ambassador Sol Linowitz, one of the negotiators of the pact, and Air Force Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, flew here from Washington Tuesday morning to brief Ford on the specifics of the agreement. Brent Scowcroft, former national security adviser to Ford, also attended the briefing at Ford's request.

Youth shot in chase by police

A 17-year-old Missouri youth was shot and wounded after leading California Highway Patrolmen on a high-speed auto chase for 15 miles along three freeways that ended Tuesday about 10:50 p.m. in Pomona.

The chase by 13 patrol cars ended after the youth reportedly tried to run down a Buena Park CHP officer who had alighted from his patrol car, officials said.

The officer fired once, wounding the youth in the shoulder. The youth later was booked on investigation of assault with a deadly weapon and grand theft auto.

CHP units from the Ontario station responded to give backup support to Buena Park units. However, they arrived to find the youth in custody of Buena Park officers.

The chase ended at Ganesha Boulevard and the San Bernardino Freeway, officials said.

Suspect loses battle with police

An armed robbery suspect, being arrested for failing to appear for trial, fought with police and managed to grab an officer's gun Tuesday afternoon before being subdued, said investigators.

Pomona police said they had gone to an apartment house at 1320 Murieta Drive just before noon Tuesday to assist a Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy in making an arrest on a Los Angeles Superior Court warrant.

The suspect, James Ford, 30, could be seen by officers as they approached his apartment.

Police said Ford demanded to see the warrant, and as it was handed to him he lunged past officers and attempted to flee.

Deputy Charles Moeller tackled Ford just outside the apartment. As Pomona Officer Duane M. Hamrick attempted to aid Moeller his gun fell from its holster and the suspect grabbed it.

Police said Ford pointed the .45 caliber automatic at the officers and warned them he would shoot. Even as Ford's threat was stated, however, Hamrick grabbed the gun and all three men wrestled on the ground.

Aided by another patrolman, the officers finally subdued Ford and he was carted off to jail, to be charged with assaulting a peace officer.

Ford was later treated for lacerations at Pomona Valley Community Hospital before being turned over to sheriff's jailers in Los Angeles.

Officer Hamrick was treated at the hospital for two bite wounds inflicted by Ford during the scuffle.

Youths attack Ontario recreation workers

Two young recreation workers investigating some damage done to the Bon View Center at 1010 S. Bon View Ave., Ontario, were attacked by seven youths armed with pool cues, pool balls and a baseball bat Tuesday night, Ontario police reported.

Ontario police said one victim, 18, a lifeguard at the center, suffered severe head and facial injuries in the attack. He was treated for his injuries at Montclair Doctors Hospital and later released.

The second victim, 17, a recreation worker at the center, also was attacked by the youths, police said. She apparently suffered only minor injuries.

Police said the two went into the recreation center and found the youths playing pool and questioned them about some damage done to the center.

The workers told police that the young men, all described as Latins, 17 to 18 years of age, suddenly attacked them.

The two workers said while they were being attacked the youths attempted to rob the center. The seven youths fled from the building after the attack.

Police said that at least four of the youths were wearing white T-shirts and dark pants. Several of the youths wore red head bands.

Bearded man robs market in Ontario

A bearded man robbed the Alpha Beta Market at 1850 S. Euclid Ave., Ontario, of an undermined amount of cash and coins Tuesday afternoon, according to Ontario police.

Police said the robber approached the store manager about 5 p.m. and displayed a handgun tucked into his waistband.

The robber demanded the store manager hand over the cash in the safe. The manager complied and the robber grabbed the money and ran from the store to an awaiting car.

Pair nabbed by resident in burglary

Two men were arrested by Ontario police Tuesday after a home in the 800 block of north Virginia Avenue was burglarized.

Police said Douglas Wayne Straw, 20, Creston, Iowa, and Kelvin Eugene Dillard, 20, Fontana, were first apprehended by a resident in the area who returned home and found his residence burglarized.

The resident told police when he drove up to his home he saw two men in a neighbor's yard holding a rifle and a scabbard and a knife he recognized as being his property.

The resident stopped the two men and had neighbors call police to the area.

Police arrested the suspects who were booked in the West End jail this morning for investigation of burglary in lieu of $5,000 bail each.

Ruling in pledge-to-flag dispute

Judge affirms student's stand on sit-down salute

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — "I did it. I'm glad I did it. I got what I wanted," said 16-yearold Debbie Lipp after a federal court judge here ruled unconstitutional New Jersey's law requiring students to stand during the pledge to the flag.

U.S. District Court Judge H. Curtis Meanor said Tuesday the Mountain Lakes High School student could remain seated during the pledge in school as long as she "doesn't whistle, drum, tap dance or otherwise be disruptive."

The decision was a victory for the high school junior who took principal Harry Morse to court when he threatened to suspend her in May for refusing to stand during the pledge.

Meanor let stand a section of the state law barring disruptions during the flag pledge.

Miss Lipp's attorney, Constance Hepburn of the American Civil Liberties Union, argued that requiring students to stand — even if they choose not to recite the Pledge of Allegiance — constitutes participation, a violation of the First Amendment right to free expression.

Miss Lipp, who moved from Massachusetts to Mountain Lakes last March, said she stood for the first week "because I was in a new environment."

Miss Lipp said Morse told her "you have to stand if you want to be in this school."

She then began sitting during the pledge because she said the phrase "with liberty and justice for all" is "a lie."

School and state attorneys claimed standing silently was not participation. "She stood when your honor entered the court room," they said.

"That's not relevant. She's never met me before," Meanor replied.

"Is there any reason to doubt she believes 'with liberty and justice for all' isn't so? Many other persons don't believe it. I know. I've sentenced a lot of them," he said.

Meanor said he based his decision on two federal appeals court cases, one of them decided in 1943, that ruled a person does not have to participate in the pledge.

"I understand the state law was meant to bring observances in line with federal customs," Meanor said, "but it uses mandatory language and I'm going to rule against it."

Hate mail began arriving soon after she was threatened with suspension from classes in May, Miss Lipp said in an interview after the court session Tuesday. "Some was obscene. Most of it was anonymous. It came from all over the country. Then fan mail began arriving," she said. "It averaged out to about 50-50 on the type of mail."

In demonstrations against her, former Rep. Joseph Maraziti suggested Miss Lipp send in her citizenship papers and receive "a passport to anywhere," mopeds appeared with "Ship the Lipps to Siberia" stickers and 100 veterans flew their flags upside down — a signal of distress.

But Miss Lipp also said, "People who I've never met before would come up and say 'Thanks'."

W. Germans call off hunt for escaped Nazi

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German police have called off their hunt for escaped Nazi war criminal Herbert Kappler amid growing belief he will be allowed his wish to die in Germany.

The police said they cancelled their alert for the ailing, 70-year-old wartime Gestapo chief in Rome because the constitution bars his extradition to Italy to complete serving a life sentence.

Kappler, reported dying of intestinal cancer, was smuggled out of a Rome military hospital early Monday by his wife. Italian officials said his illness had reduced him to 105 pounds, and she apparently took him out in a big suitcase.

West German officials said Mrs. Kappler telephoned Monday that she had brought her husband to West Germany, but his whereabouts were not known. Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti ordered his ambassador in Bonn to begin extradition proceedings, and a police hunt was ordered for the missing man.

The Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden announced Tuesday night that the police were no longer involved. It said the courts would have to decide whether action might be taken against Kappler. But the constitution prohibits extradition of West German nationals to face legal action abroad, and the West German government had repeatedly asked the Italian government to send him home to die.

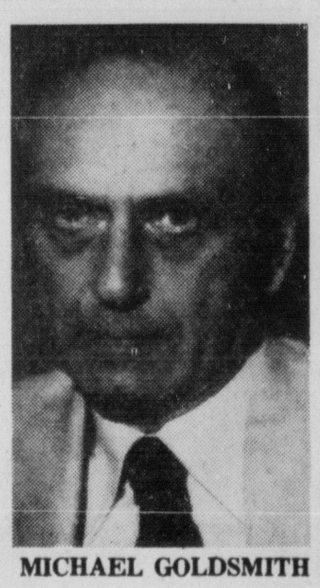
The constitutional ban on extradition already is protecting about 250 Germans sentenced in absentia for war crimes by French courts.

Kappler had served 30 years of a life sentence for ordering the 1944 Ardeatine Caves massacre in Rome of 335 Italians. They were shot in reprisal for the death of 32 German soldiers in a Partisan ambush in Nazi-occupied Rome.

Kappler's escape touched off protests from Partisan veterans and Italian Jewish groups. Thousands attended a memorial service Tuesday at the Ardeatine Caves.

Fearing hostile demonstrations, Andreotti and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt postponed a meeting they had planned for Friday in Verona.

In West Germany, however, the feeling was widespread that Kappler had more than atoned for his crimes by his long imprisonment.



MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

Newsman tells of arrest, beating

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Goldsmith, veteran Associated Press foreign correspondent, says he was beaten and shackled hand and foot at times during 30 days of imprisonment in the Central African Empire.

Goldsmith was arrested July 14 while on assignment in the former French colony and released Sunday, Aug. 14.

"Shortly after my arrest, I was brought before Emperor Bokassa I, ruler of the country, who without any warning or explanation or attempt to interrogate me, struck me across the forehead with a heavy stick, causing a severe wound," Goldsmith said Tuesday night.

"This was at the royal palace in Berengo, about 70 miles southwest of the capital of Bangui, in the presence of at least one of his sons and several members of his entourage. After I was struck, I was kicked unconscious by members of his group."

Goldsmith said he was returned to Bangui and kept handcuffed and chained in a small cell while his wounds, including the forehead gash, went unattended for several days and became seriously infected.

After a week's time, however, treatment became better, Goldsmith said. He received medical attention, his handcuffs and leg chains were removed and he was given satisfactory meals.

Goldsmith, 55, a British citizen, said he was told he was arrested because he was suspected of being a spy for whiteruled South Africa and sent to the Central African Empire as contact man for a South African agent there.

Goldsmith said this accusation apparently resulted from his filing a dispatch from Bangui to Johannesburg dealing with Bokassa and his plans for his coronation on Dec. 4.

Goldsmith said he was unaware during his imprisonment that Jonathan Randal, an American citizen and correspondent for The Washington Post, had been arrested at about the same time but released a week later.

Efforts by diplomats of several countries either to gain access to Goldsmith or to obtain his release were fruitless.

On Friday, Aug. 12, Goldsmith was suddenly taken from his Bangui prison, driven back to Berengo and brought before Bokassa again.

Medi-Cal reform bill opposed

By BOB SWETNAM

A Medi-Cal reform bill that could end up costing taxpayers millions of dollars if adopted in its present form was poposed this week by San Bernardino County supervisors.

Senate Bill 660, originally supported by the county Board of Supervisors, would mandate that all governmental agencies that administer Medi-Cal and welfare funds be required to maintain their present levels of service to the poor and needy. In addition, the bill would require agencies to provide benefits to any persons requesting it.

Supervisor Dennis Hansberger said the bill would cost taxpayers millions of dollars if adopted by the state legislature. He urged other supervisors to oppose it.

"This bill is a particular problem in two ways. It means we can't change the services we offer and must provide service to anyone who asks for it," he said.

Hansberger said the bill was originally intended as a reform bill for the Medi-Cal system that provides health care to those who cannot afford it. A recent amendment to that bill, however, has apparently changed the character of the legislation, according to Hansberger.

"I urge we inform the state legislature that we will not participate in this program if it becomes law," he said.

Supervisors were informed that if they did not accept the terms of the legislation if it does become law, they could lose all state funds for welfare and Medi-Cal programs in the county.

Such a move would force drastic cuts in the county's service to the poor, Hansberger indicated.

County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin told supervisors other counties in the state will probably similarly oppose the SB 660 bill.

"The state legislature should not mandate programs that are paid for out of local property tax funds," said Foodwin.

He said the bill, as presently written, would require the county to provide medical services and welfare to any person who asked for it if they were a resident of the county or not.

He said the problem of illegal aliens — who would also be eligible for welfare assistance under the proposed law — would compound problems in the county's welfare system.

"The illegal alien problem is a national one, not a local one," Goodwin said.

MAC for Chino Hills approved

To provide more local citizen input in decision-making, the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors this week approved the establishment of a Municipal Advisory Council for the rapidly growing Chino Hills.

A seven-member council of Chino Hills residents will be appointed by supervisors to advise the county on matters concerning the unincorporated area located west of the City of Chino.

The committee will have one member each from the communities of Los Serranos, Glenmeade and Carbon Canyon. In addition, a resident served by the Chino Basin Municipal Water District, and one served by the Pomona Valley Water Co. will also serve. Two representatives of property owners in the Chino Hills will complete the seven-member council.

Supervisor Robert Townsend of Chino said, "I trust this MAC will be the first step in establishing a better form of government for the unincorporated community of the Chino Hills."

MAC members will study sphere of influence needs, growth and development plans, water, sewage, fire protection, street lighting and park and recreation needs. They will report to supervisors their recommendations.

The MAC will attempt to coordinate planning for the community, which has had a rapid growth rate in recent years.

Townsend said there were about 3,500 residents living in the Chino Hills a few years ago. Recently that number has grown to an estimated 10,000 residents.

Much of the area has historically been rural, but that trend has changed with the development of many single-family residences.

Townsend said residents believe the area is in danger of losing its semi-rural character.

"Every year we go through a whole series of requests to change the general plan for the area," said Townsend. "We've been successful in reducing densities in some of that area and the establishment of this MAC will give local citizens more influence in the planning decisions made. The community should have a voice in planning for its own needs."

Townsend believes there is a need for coordinated planning in the area. Governmental special districts exist in Los Serranos, Glenmeade and Carbon Canyon, but officials foresee creation of the MAC as a way of unifying the area.

"The creation of the MAC is in no way intended to interfere with the independant function or activities of the present (special district) advisory commissions or boards in operation," Townsend explained. "It is instead intended to pull together the fragmented activities in the area."

Dennis Chiniaeff, community development director for the City of Chino, appeared before the supervisors Monday to ask if the city would still have an input on decisions affecting its sphere of influence. Townsend assured him the city would be kept informed and asked to participate in any discussions concerning the spheres of influence.

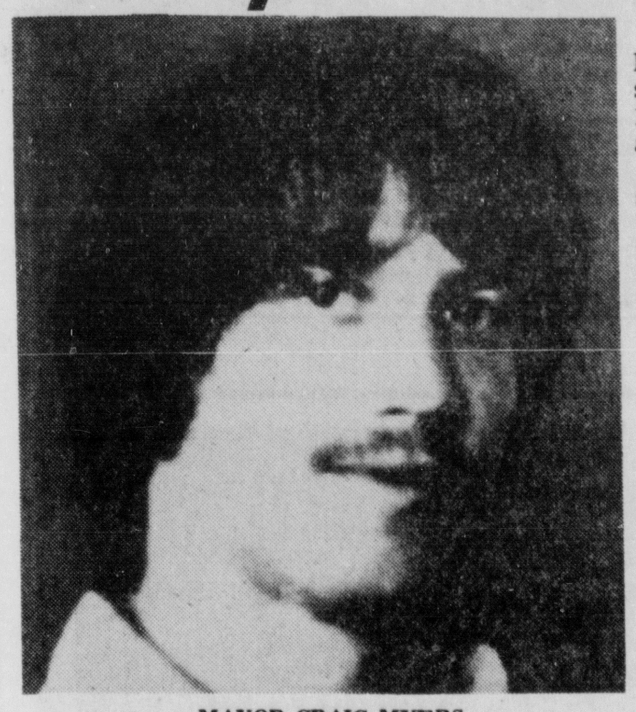
Mayor turns back on politics



MAYOR CRAIG MYERS

LIBERTY CENTER, Ohio (AP) — At 20, Craig Myers feels ready to venture past the cornfields surrounding this northwest Ohio farming village of 1,200. So he's resigning as mayor on Sept. 1 to begin a four-year stint with the U.S. Air Force.

"You know how it is in a small town, at my age," said Myers, who was the youngest mayor in the United States when elected at age 18 in 1975.He'll report to boot camp at Lackland AFB in Texas in mid-September.

"I have no regrets about my term of office. The council was behind me all the way and the people gave us support," he said.

"I just want to do something with my life," said Myers, whose departure will come at the end of 20 months in office. His contract with the Air Force says he'll study weapons maintenance in Colorado.

"I regret having to leave Liberty Center, and a lot of people have said they are sad to see me taking off," said Myers, who's also giving up a job inspecting cans at the Campbell Soup Co. in nearby Napoleon.

With support from 18-year-olds voting for the first time and from farmers, senior citizens and a few factory workers, Myers edged out a high school science teacher for the $1,200-per-year job. He ran partly on a dare from friends after he was arrested for a curfew violation.

"The curfew is still on the books, but it hasn't been enforced since I've been in office," he said.

Myers' tenure has seen the ushering in of a new, one-man police force to replace the chief who hassled him. His biggest frustrations have come in fighting an electricity rate increase — first for the street lights, now for everyone. He says he succeeded in delaying the hike but expects the state Public Utilities Commission to approve it.

"The most important thing I learned is how the law works," Myers said of his term in office.

His successor will be council president Bob Young, in his mid-40s. And what will Myers do after his Air Force stint, run for office again?

"Probably when I get older, when I get out of the service, I may do it again, but not in a big city or for a state office or like that," said the mayor of Liberty Corners.

New agency planned to avoid conflict

Law enforcement duplication mish mash

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a building is bombed, who investigates the crime? That question has started scores of arguments between the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The disputes arise from laws that don't spell out clearly which agency has jurisdiction over which bombings. Similar disputes affect dozens of other agencies with federal law enforcement responsibilities.

Racketeering investigations lead to drug rings, and narcotics probes end up as organized crime cases. But the FBI has no jurisdiction over drugs, and the Drug Enforcement Administration has no jurisdiction over syndicate crime.

The FBI and inspectors for the Department of Housing and Urban Development may duplicate each other's work in housing fraud investigations. Tax investigators may stumble upon bribery cases over which they have no authority.

The list of potential and actual conflicts among federal law enforcement agencies seems endless. It means much time and money that could be spent on solving crimes must be devoted to settling interagency arguments.

President Carter's reorganization specialists in the Office of Management and Budget are mulling over an idea that might solve some of the old problems, though it is certain to stir fears of too much White House control over federal law enforcement.

The idea, according to an OMB reorganization man, is a National Law Enforcement Council. It would work out of the White House and would be patterned after the National Security Council, which coordinates and advises the President in foreign policy matters. The attorney general would be a key member, along with other executive branch officials who supervise law enforcement units.

The council, or a similar mechanism, would be designed to improve coordination among the agencies and to set clear priorities for law enforcement.

It could give the President stronger and more direct control over what kind of crime is investigated and prosecuted most vigorously.

But the proposal is nothing more than an idea at present.

The general government reorganization team must find out how many government agencies have policing or investigative responsibilities. Under the direction of former Atlanta lawyer Tread Davis, the team last month began to compile the information and found that it's not as simple as it may sound.

A General Accounting Office report two years ago listed 75 agencies employing 169,000 persons in police or investigative work. "We now think it's closer to 90 agencies," said the OMB official.

"There are 23 different guard forces in the metropolitan Washington area alone," he remarked. "Everything from the guards at the National Zoo to the Capitol police. They've grown up with different salary schedules, different requirements, different training. We've found that the training can range from less than a week for one agency to 15 or 16 weeks for another."

He said the OMB team is attempting, for the first time in 40 years, to "take a look at the whole question of the multiplicity of federal organizations performing police or investigative activities!.."

"The FBI, for example, enforces many laws which were passed in the 1930s, when state and local governments didn't have the law enforcement capabilities they have today," he noted.

Congress has formed some agencies and added new responsibilities to others in a rather haphazard way, he commented. The Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agency — ATF — grew out of prohibition, but Congress later gave it jurisdiction over bombings.

The FBI and ATF have agreed that the FBI investigates terrorist bombings and ATF handles the rest. But many bombings cannot be neatly categorized at once "unless the terrorist is kind enough to call in advance and take credit," the OMB official observed.

After developing information on the present system, the Davis team will consider what agencies could be merged or perhaps eliminated.

"We're not reaching any conclusions yet about consolidation," the OMB official said.

But he said it's highly unlikely the team would propose merging all federal law enforcement agencies into one, with a single person in charge. "There's really no way you could put all of these agencies under one person, except the President." And, of course, they're all under the President now.

Politically, any sort of merger could run into trouble from the agencies that would lose power and their supporters in Congress and private interest groups.

The OMB man said he expects the study to take two years. "We're trying to set out some way to look at the forest, but along the way, if we identify some dead trees that need pruning, we'll go ahead."

Oops! L.A. supervisors in court study duplication

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

In one of the major foulups of big government, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors Tuesday established a blue ribbon panel to study court reforms just hours after the Superior Court announced it has come up with its own program of 42 improvements.

Apparently the supervisors were not aware that the judges were making their report.

At the urging of Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, the board established a 15-member panel of "the most distinguished attorneys, judges and top business and community leaders" to work on a one-year task force to recommend court improvements.

But the judges revealed their recommendations for those improvements at a press conference earlier in the day and said they were forwarding their report to the board.

Some of the same judges who had worked on the court committee were being suggested by the supervisors for their panel.

The board adopted the concept of the "blue ribbon" group without discussion Tuesday. The group is to make a year-long study and report its findings to the board by Sept. 30, 1978.

Meanwhile, William Hogoboom, presiding judge of the county's Superior Court system, said 26 of the 42 recommendations can be implemented only after state laws are amended.

They include a reduction in the size of civil juries from 12 to eight, streamlining the jury selection system, improving pretrial arbitrations, requiring omnibus pretrial conferences, giving more discretion to judges, and cutting through the red tape now required in legal procedures.

Sixteen of the recommendations deal with intracourt procedures which the judges feel do not need any changes in the state law.

Twenty-four judges worked on the judicial commission for the past six months, Hogoboom said.

"The resulting set of recommendations will save the taxpayers million dollars a year and will cut down some of the congestion in our courts," he declared.

The committee will continue to function, making semiannual reports and recommendations as the proposals are adopted by the courts. The group also will serve as an advocate of its recommendations before the legislature.

Conspicuous by its absence from the list of recommendations was a heavily supported bid by the supervisors to merge the county's Superior and Municipal courts into one system.

That proposal has been sent to the state Legislature by the board, but without the support of the judges it has little chance for passage.

Also supported by the supervisor is a pilot program for a "one trial, one day" jury system that would require prospective jurors to spend less time in the courts. That program was adopted by the courts last week and is now being tried in Santa Monica.

Informed this morning of the judges' recommendations, Hahn said he was "glad to get them, but they really don't go far enough. The major reforms are still not there."

He said that in addition to the lawyers and judges, he wanted his commission to include a certified public accountant to assist in computing potential tax savings.

If the supervisors go through with the followup work in establishing the commission, its members are expected to be named by Oct. 1.

Chino lowers tax, but residents still find it upsetting

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

It's not at all unusual these days to hear complaints about high property taxes.

But has anyone ever heard of homeowners protesting a reduction in their property tax bill?

Due to an unusual quirk of circumstances, several Chino citizens did just that in action before the City Council Tuesday night.

City officials, thinking they were doing homeowners in three recently built housing tracts a favor by reducing a special landscaping assessment on their tax bills, discovered that many of the homeowners had never been informed they would have to pay the tax at all and even if they had . . . they didn't like the idea.

For about two years, Chino planning officials have been requiring most land developers in the city to establish special tax assessment districts for landscape maintenance purposes.

When developers build tracts of homes, they are often required to put in planters and other landscaping improvements along neighborhood streets to help beautify the area. The land developer has to pay for maintenance of the landscaping for one year after the homes are occupied. After that, individual residents are taxed by the city for the cost of the maintenance.

City officials estimated the cost per household of maintaining landscaping in three tracts in south Chino would vary from $42 to $116 this year.

Since landscaping tended to improve the beauty of the city as well as homeowners' property, however, officials recommended that the city pay for part of the maintenance in the area.

Instead of charging residents the varying fees, officials called for a uniform fee of $30 per year for all homeowners in the three tracts.

Nearly 100 spectators present at Tuesday's City Council meeting, objected to the $30 fee.

Many claimed that when they bought their homes they were never told they would later have to pay taxes for landscape maintenance. Others argued it was an unfair tax.

Due to an admitted oversight by one developer of the tracts, many homeowners were apparently uninformed they would later be required to pay the tax.

Richard Lewis, president of Lewis Homes, admitted his firm had made a mistake on the special assessment notices to about 113 homeowners. In a letter to the City Council, he promised homeowners his firm would pay this year's tax assessments for landscaping.

Apparently that wasn't enough for the angry homeowners, however.

"I oppose this tax. I pay high enough taxes as it is," said homeowner John Rodman.

"We already pay high taxes because our homes are new," said Steve Theyer.

Homeowners argued that the special assessment — even at $30 per year — was unfair and that it shouldn't cost maintenance crews $5,000 per year to maintain landscaping in the neighborhood.

"I've only seen maintenance men in our area come one time in the last year," said Bov Esposito, questioning the high cost of the maintenance.

Annete Smith, a homeowner, told the council, "Most of the people on our street are opposed to this. We pay high taxes already."

She suggested the city should pay for all of the landscape maintenance in the special districts.

The City Council, however, decided unanimously to impose the $30 tax on all residents who knew about it and had paid it before.

For those residents it will mean a tax savings of about $50 per year.

Residents in the 113 households who did not have prior knowledge of the tax will get a one year reprieve, the council decided. Developer Lewis will pay their special tax.

Construction of larger L.V. library recommended

Los Angeles County Supervisor Peter Schabarum has sent to the county Board of Supervisors a recommendation for construction of a larger library to serve the La Verne community.

County Librarian Carol Moss said a study, ordered by Schabarum last spring, shows the city needs a bigger library than the existing facility which houses only 12,000 books.

The present branch library, operating from leased quarters, has a floor space of 3,700 square feet. Mrs. Moss said the new library, if built, would have 10,000 square feet of floor space and 40,000 books.

"Chief Administrative Officer Harry Hufford and I agree that La Verne needs larger quarters," she said. "As a result, we are revising our five-year plan to include the construction of a new La Verne facility in the fiscal year of 1978-79."

Mrs. Moss said she turned in a "positive report" showing that La Verne had outgrown the present branch long ago. She reported the library will be built if the county Board of Supervisors concurs with her recommendation.

Money would come from taxes levied by the county for improvement and maintenance of its library system.

The request for improved library service originally came from the La Verne City Council last spring. At the time, the council urged the library system to join the city in the construction of a larger civic center on the site of the Shea Building, Foothill Boulevard and D Street, which will be converted into a new City Hall next October.

Mrs. Moss said she was willing to recommend acceptance of that site under certain conditions.

She would like frontage along Foothill Boulevard so the branch library would be more visible, she wants D Street improved in front of the proposed civic center, and she wants to extend Durwood Avenue which now ends at the property. This could serve as an alternate approach.

The librarian reported she had sent a copy of her recommendations to Schabarum.

The supervisor is on vacation this week, but he had stated earlier he would abide by the results of her study.

Alcohol misuse programs hit by Ken Hahn

Ten alcohol misuse programs, including a $209,000 federal project at Pomona College, Claremont, came under fire Tuesday by Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn.

The supervisor blasted the programs, costing $1.5 million, as "a waste of money" which doesn't seem to offer any constructive results.

The answer "is simple," Hahn said. "If you don't want to become an alcoholic, you don't start drinking — it takes a little will power and self control."

Hahn said millions of dollars are spent each year by county, state and federal agencies who are looking for answers to alcohol abuse but never seem to find them.

"We are wasting money that could be used more productively elsewhere," he charged.

"But the problem will not be solved until we mobilize public opinion to combat what is the greatest propaganda machine in the world: the liquor industry."

The supervisor called for "revolt by decent citizens against the constant drum fire put out by the liquor industry publicists extolling the virtues of social drinking."

In addition to the program at Pomona College, Hahn also attacked federal grants at UCLA, USC, and Mt. Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles, alcohol services to the gay communities and studies at the Rand Corp. and at Huntington Memorial Hospital.

He asked the Department of Health Services for a report showing how many alcoholism studies are being conducted throughout the U.S. and how much time and money is being spent on them.

Hill trial slated Oct. 3

Gag order issued in rape-slaying case

Attorneys, police officers, court personnel and public officials have been ordered not to discuss the Clarence Hill rape-slaying case with the news media prior to Hill's Oct. 3 trial in West Valley Superior Court.

Hill, 27, Pomona, is accused of raping and killing a 15-year-old Pomona girl June 24 in her mother's Montclair apartment; attempting to murder the mother; and raping and attempting to murder another 15-year-old girl who was staying in the apartment that night.

He was arrested a day after the crimes were committed. He remains in the San Bernardino County jail in lieu of $100,000 bail.

Judge Kenneth Ziebarth said he imposed the gag order, as requested by public defender Ellen Brody who is defending Hill, after no one appeared to object. "I had no choice," Ziebarth said.

Transcripts of the preliminary hearing were closed to the news media and spectators at the request of the defense. By California law, it is the right of the defendant charged with a felony to request and be granted closed preliminary hearing.

In most cases, however, transcripts of preliminary hearings are available to the press.

Attempts to close trials to the public and news media by various courts across the country have met with little success because of various constitutional guarantees including the First, Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments dealing with Freedom of the Press, the right to a speedy and public trial and due process of law.

Valley newspapers carried comprehensive accounts of the rape-slaying of Audrey Townsend, the rape and attempted murder of her girlfriend and the attempted murder of her mother in the apartment at 10342 Ramona Ave.

Following Hill's arrest and arraignment on nine felony counts in West Valley Municipal Court, a $1 million bail was set and a court order was issued prohibiting discussion of the case by police, court personnel, attorneys, and public officials. Since that time, bail has been reduced.

That gag order has remained in effect through Hill's Superior Court appearances.

Claremont commission meeting expected to draw large crowd

Despite predicted rain, a large attendance is expected tonight at the Claremont City Council chamber when the Architectural Commission reviews architectural and site plans for developer Charles H. Cooke's $1.5 million, 100,000-square-foot "speculative" building in the Claremont Business Park.

The first building in the 45-acre park on Arrow Highway is being scheduled for the northeast corner of Cambridge Avenue and Wharton Drive, a planned street that winds through the park to Bucknell Avenue.

Residents surrounding the park on three sides have complained that if a La Verne firm, Chinook International Inc., moves into the proposed building, problems of noise, odor and particle emission may have to be mitigated.

Cooke told the council recently that whether Chinook came to Claremont or not, he would erect an industrial building.

He said it is up to Chinook to solve its own environmental problems.

The California State Electronics Association has voted unanimously to raise $100,000 to defray costs of legal actions to force television manufacturers to increase their in-warranty fees, thus allowing shops to reduce their over-all charges for TV repairs.

Flawed alien program

President Carter has recognized the grave problem posed by the estimated 6 million to 12 million illegal aliens in this country. But his program to deal with it seems flawed and unworkable.

In his message to Congress, Carter correctly said "millions of undocumented aliens . . . have breached our nation's immigration laws, displaced many American citizens from jobs and placed an increased financial burden on many states and local governments."

Carter proposed the following major steps:

—Amnesty for foreigners who sneaked into the country before 1970 and lived here continuously since. They could stay, be eligible for most forms of federal aid and bring in their parents, spouses and children.

—"Nondeportable" status for those who came between 1970 and last Jan. 1. They could remain and work for five years after the law takes effect.

—Civil fines for employers who engage in a "pattern" of "knowingly" hiring illegal aliens.

—Adding 2,000 agents (about 40 per cent) to the undermanned border patrol in hopes of slowing the flood of illegal border crossers.

Carter's proposed penalty of a $1,000 fine for hiring an illegal alien is weak and riddled with outs. For example, an employer would get off if the worker showed him a Social Security card. Forgeries are cheap and easy to come by.

In fact, the forgery of "amnesty kits" — faked documents — has become an industry in Mexican border towns in anticipation of amnesty.

Aliens will have great incentive to be able to "prove" they were in the country before 1970 or before the start of 1977, and massive resort to forgery must be expected. Since millions of persons may be involved, immigration offices and the courts will be unable to deal with the pressure.

If Carter's suggestions pass Congress, as a practical matter everyone who can show he was here before 1977 will be able to remain indefinitely — and eventually to bring his relatives. The typical alien has five members of his immediate family at home, and thus our pouplation could swell by as many as 40 million people in the next few years.

And this in a country that is having desperate trouble providing enough jobs for its own citizens.

Not only that, but in the minds of impoverished Mexican peasants — the major source of illegal immigration — one amnesty will be followed by another. They will figure if they can get into America and hide for a few years, they too will benefit from a future dispensation.

The only indisputable part of the Carter program is the need for a strengthened border patrol. The 2,000 extra men the President wants should be hired fast. They'll have their work cut out for them as soon as word of his amnesty spreads south of the border.

Myth about illegitimacy

One of the things "we all know" is that poor women have illegitimate children so they can get higher welfare payments from the government.

The only trouble with that assumption is that it isn't true. At least that's what two researchers concluded after studying hundreds of young girls who had become pregnant out of wedlock.

The researchers — Kristin A. Moore of the Urban Institute and Steven B. Caldwell of Cornell University — found, in fact, that states with high welfare benefits have a lower proportion of illegitimate births than less generous states do.

Not surprisingly, they found that pregnancy rates among unmarried girls tend to be lower where family planning services are readily available to all women, regardless of their ability to pay.

Behold, on the mountains the feet of him who brings good tidings, who proclaims peace! Keep your feasts, O Judah, fulfill your vows, for never again shall the wicked come against you, he is utterly cut off. — Nahum 1:15.

Peace is not made at the council table, or by treaties, but in the hearts of men. — Herbert Hoover.

ORV's not to blame

Dear Editor:

The Associated Press article last Friday on "Our Delicate Desert" leaves much to be desired, when it comes to truthful reporting. It may sound good for a preservationist's propaganda but the writer sure got some basic facts twisted around.

We know that archaeological sites are carried away by museums. So don't blame the offroad vehicles. When some cacti are missing, they are likely carried off by a commercial outfit selling them for profit. How the writer figured out that ORVs cause large dust storms is a mystery to me. We had dust storms before anybody drove through the desert.

Your experts are good on blanket statement. One must always remember that the Bureau of Land Management is dedicated to the control of people; environmental concern is the vehicle to accomplish control. So we find all environmental issues being blown completely out of proportion and the experts become tools of environmental propaganda.

Our government's effort for control shows itself in the passing of the "Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976," Public Law 94-579 and President Carter's recent effort to amend Executive Order 11644 which would have banned all vehicles from public lands.

If our government sees fit to spend $40 million for a desert study besides all the other millions they spent before and there are never enough funds to contain the criminals, so I can safely walk the street, then there is surely something wrong. How can the American using an ORV expect a fair treatment?

Jailed dissident's own story

WASHINGTON — Another Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn is crying out to us from deep within the Soviet prison system. He is Yosyp Terelya, a 34-year-old dissident poet, who has spent 14 years in Soviet prison and psychiatric hospitals for refusing to renounce his beliefs.

He was finally turned loose late last year, then rearrested in June. He is now back in a grim Soviet institution. But during his brief months of freedom, he wrote movingly about his long ordeal. His story, written in longhand, has been smuggled out to us.

Some Soviet prisons, writes the determined poet, "would have been the envy of Dante for characters and descriptions of scenes from hell."

The KGB secret police first began harassing Terelya when he was 19. He was guilty of two offenses against the Kremlin. First, he is a Ukranian, a proud breed of 50 million people who refuse to abandon their ancient culture.

Second, he is a devout member of the Ukranian Uniate Church, which places God ahead of the state. But it was probably Terelya's eloquence, his ability to express his independent views in stirring language, that most alarmed the Soviet establishment.

Terelya was first railroaded into prison in 1962. But he was young and strong in those days; he escaped and lived for months under assumed names. Eventually, he was recaptured and jailed in the village of Ladyshyno.

"My poems, notes and even my thoughts — all this became evidence of criminal activities aimed at creating a so-called independent Ukraine," he writes.

What was a day like in the life of Yosyp Terelya? "We were made to pick up and stack granite slabs . . . We were given three twigs to clean the cells of water sloshed on the floor. We were forced to stand for days on one spot," recalls the poet.

Beatings became routine. "Religious" prisoners were lashed to their chairs by telephone wires and made objects of humiliating ridicule.

In the winter, the snow and rain soaked Terelya's summer uniform. Yet "for inserting towels underneath our shirts and thus violating the uniform dress code, we were severely beaten . . . I did not know that 'cruel' treatment could also be official, that is, sanctioned by law."

For the following two years, Terelya was tortured by the KGB, which demanded that he admit to membership in a Ukranian nationalist group that was disbanded when he was three years old.

"They placed me in a penal cell for 15 days. The temperature of the cell changed every hour — one hour hot, one hour cold. Here I got hypertonia and hemorrhoids." KGB officers told Terelya that if he cooperated, "They would free me in a year, give me a woman and good food." But the continuous physical abuse took its toll; his spine was struck by paralysis; he began to hemorrhage profusely from the nose, mouth and ear. He was transferred to a psychiatric hospital, where his fingers were broken for trying to write with pencil and paper.

One night, after the stubborn poet refused to renounce his religious beliefs, he was tied to a cross, his mouth gagged, and was beaten by the guards. He was later made to drink water from a toilet bowl.

Terelya's harshest treatment came at Sychovka, another psychiatric hospital where he was imprisoned in 1972. Soon after he arrived, "Some ten persons — guards and orderlies — burst into the section, jumped on me, beat me and tied me to my bed, all the time demanding to know who I planned to kill.

"I remained tied to my bed for a full two months, receiving a nightly 'kulazin treatment' from the guards and orderlies, who beat me with their boots and keys."

He recalls that the prison administration sanctioned the extra abuse of Jewish prisoners. "For laughs, they would force the sick to eat live frogs. They raped the sick and thus satisfied their own sexual needs — and all for laughs!"

One patient was killed "with a hammer because he had asked for permission to go to the lavatory," Terelya testifies. A Georgian Jew, pronounced mentally ill for seeking to emigrate to Israel, was tortured to death. Still another patient was beaten nightly by orderlies for two months until he died.

One mentally disturbed prisoner was shot in cold blood after an escape attempt. "Tell me," he asks "in what other country do they shoot the mentally ill?"

Getting rich off handicapped

By MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For Ralf D. Hotchkiss, a 29-year-old engineer with a strong social conscience, it began with some informal window-shopping on a trip to London four years ago. He was interested in the price of an item most people ignore — a wheelchair.

"I noticed that wheelchairs were selling in Britain for about a third of the price charged for identical chairs in the United States," recalls Hotchkiss. "I inquired about buying one, but the salesman said the parent company didn't allow shipments to the western hemisphere."

Hotchkiss was more than casually interested in wheelchair prices for two reasons. First, he was disabled in a motorcycle accident 11 years ago and, as a result, is one of approximately 400,000 Americans for whom that medical device is a necessity of life.

In addition, he heads a Washington-based organization called the Center for Concerned Engineering, which began as a product safety organization founded by Ralph Nader but now concentrates on independent research of devices for the disabled.

After returning from his trip, Hotchkiss published a detailed analysis of the price differences he found, often amounting to $30 or more for the same wheelchair marketed in the two countries.

For example, one chair manufactured by Everest & Jennings International (E&J), a Los Angeles firm which boasts that it is the largest producer of wheelchairs in the world, sold in this country for $496.

An identical chair was priced at $161 in Great Britain — and it was manufactured by Zimmer Orthopaedic Ltd., a British firm in which E&J owned almost 55 per cent of the outstanding stock until at least 1975.

Hotchkiss' findings inspired Justice Department anti-trust officials to open an investigation, but it dragged on uneventfully for three years until Debby Kaplan became interested in the problem.

A young woman who works for the Disability Rights Center, another Washington-based public interest group, Ms. Kaplan was present at a mid-April luncheon sponsored by Public Citizen, a Nader organization. The speaker that day was Attorney General Griffin B. Bell. When Ms. Kaplan asked about the long-stalled probe, Bell wasn't familiar with it but promised to check.

Less than a month later, the Justice Department filed a civil suit in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, alleging that E&J has violated the Sherman Antitrust Act since at least 1955 by seeking to monopolize the domestic wheelchair industry.

The suit specifically charges that E&J entered into agreements with the largest wheelchair manufacturers in Britain (Zimmer) and West Germany (Ortopedia GmbH) which prevented them from exporting any wheelchairs to the United States.

E&J is well known if not particularly beloved by those who are forced to depend on its wheelchairs as their only means of mobility but who criticize the company for producing an overpriced but inferior product.

About 75 per cent of the firm's total sales volume (almost $65.5 million last year) is attributable to wheelchairs. It manufactures 60 per cent of all wheelchairs sold in this country and 90 per cent of the "prescription" chairs sold to the severely disabled.

E&J insists that it produces a high quality product, that it has "done nothing contrary" to the antitrust laws and that the Justice Department suit "comes as a complete surprise."

But one survey reports that wheelchair users complain of chronic breakdowns, inferior equipment and inadequate repair service. Another study claims E&J spent $480,000 for advertising in 1975 but only $300,000 for research and development.

"E&J pays lip service to producing a chair with improved mobility and durability," says Hotchkiss. "But basically it's a monopolistic company which makes a great deal of money (more than $2 million in after-tax profits last year) off the handicapped without really responding to their needs."

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

Whatever happened to the $2 bill our government's financial experts reactivated not so many months ago? But why should one bother to ask? Isn't the answer all too obvious to any of us who happen to have one of those controversial little beauties in our possession today? In purchasing power it is now only worth $1.86 as compared to what it would buy when first issued.

But it isn't only those of us with $2 in financial assets who are feeling the pinch. Times are tough everywhere. Even our lawyers and judges can't seem to make enough money trying people only once. So now, to make ends meet, they are trying people a second time around. The Leslie Van Houten trial is a typical example of how our legal lights can cash in twice on the same old case.

Guard looking for recruits

By EARL G. WATERS

Young Californians would seem to be overlooking a golden opportunity to not only augment their current earnings but provide themselves with a guaranteed lifetime income. Furthermore, many are passing up the chance to increase their earning abilities in private employment.

This assessment is seen in the statement of Maj. Gen. Frank Schober who recently observed that California's National Guard is the state's best kept secret. Schober, a career military man who resigned from the regular Army after 19 years' service to become commanding officer of the Guard, was referring to recruitment difficulties in maintaining his new army.

With an authorized strength of 26,000, Schober is currently looking for 5,000 volunteers to meet muster. He was quick to point out more would be accepted, indicating he would really like another 15,000 and there was no absolute limit.

Veterans of World War II, who served for $21 a month, would be inclined to agree with Schober's view that his enlistment difficulties stem from a lack of knowledge of the benefits offered those who sign up.

Just being a guardsman guarantees one of a supplemental income of $48 a month, augmented annually by about $200 for two weeks' summer training. That, of course, is for the buck private but promotions, which come more easily and rapidly in the Guard than in the regular Army, boost the pay according to rank.

Excepting for the two-week stint at summer camp and the initial basic training period, all that is required of guardsmen is attendance once a month at a weekend drill.

During basic training period, which includes extended specialty training for a total of six months, recruits earn a minimum of $376 monthly. Aside from taxes the stipend is free and clear, the Guard furnishing all living essentials. If a recruit is married, there is another $73 a month and if there are children, an additional monthly allotment of $123. Employed persons need not worry about their jobs during the training period, for the law requires employers to keep their jobs open for their return.

The ranks are open to anyone, male or female, between the ages of 17 and 34. While high school graduates are preferred, it is not a requirement but the Guard will help those lacking the diploma to achieve it.

In fact, training rather than pay is the benefit most emphasized by Schober. He said young people have the opportunity to acquire skills in almost every field of endeavor. Those skills can qualify them for high paying jobs in private enterprises.

For college graduates, especially those with professional skills, there are commissions awaiting. Although the critical need is for medical doctors, there are openings for engineers, lawyers and most of the other professionals.

In addition to the pay and training, service in the Guard provides eligibility for veteran home loans and builds a military pension benefit. Also Guard members rate PX and commissary privileges at all military bases!

Enlistments are for six years for the men and three years for women. The usual military releases for hardship or other causes are, however, available. Those with prior military service need only sign for a year. And they can enter the Guard at the highest rank held in former service!

Reviewing what the Guard of today has to offer it is indeed difficult to understand Schober's recruitment difficulties.

Ann Landers

More than nodding acquaintance

Dear Ann Landers: According to my husband we aren't related. How do you like that, after 23 years and seven children?

We got into the discussion when he was filling out a card of some kind. It asked who is your next of kin. I saw him write down his mother's name. When I told him I was his closest relative he replied, "No, you aren't. As a matter of fact, if you want to get technical we aren't even related."

I told him I wasn't the kind of woman who would live with a stranger and maybe he had better move out. He said I was getting senile before my time and maybe he should have the mental health people come and get me.

Please settle this argument, Ann. It's in its fourth day and I don't think I can take much more. Thank you. — Living With A Stranger In Abilene, Texas

Dear Living. It seems to me a woman who has given her husband seven children is more than just a nodding acquaintance. In fact, according to law you are his next of kin.

Your husband, no doubt, means you are not a blood relative, which of course is true. He sounds like a needle artist to me. Tune him out when he starts to act precious. Four-day fights are bad for the nerves.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you published a letter from a dog. Would you please give equal time to a cat?

Dear Ann: I live in a very comfortable home, have plenty of food, a grassy yard and lots of loving attention.

My problem? I am four years old and have given birth to 20 kittens. As soon as the kittens are through nursing, my master takes them to the animal shelter.

Yesterday a visitor told him there was no good reason for this senseless breeding of unwanted kittens and that I should be spayed. Every day the animal shelters are forced to kill most of the kittens and puppies to make room for the next flood of unwanted animals. She also said it was a great burden on the taxpayers but that the killings at the animal shelters, sad as they were, were preferable to the fate of abandoned cats and dogs who die from starvation, injury, or abuse.

After hearing of the fate of unwanted animals I no longer want to contribute to the problem. My owners read your column every day and respect your judgment. I hope you will tell him that I should be spayed immediately because old Mother Nature is once again making me desire the company of the sexy Tom next door. — One Of Millions

Dear One: You sound like a pretty hip cat to me. I hope your owner and millions of those who have pets will get the picture and do likewise.

Dear Readers: I was nearly stomped to death by the shoe industry for saying the new models are cripplers and a woman has got to be suicide-prone to venture out in those five-inch spikes. The solution I suggested — wear your old ones.

Several maunfacturers hastened to inform me that those five-inch spikes are mostly in the windows and there are plenty of lower-heeled numbers in the stock rooms. I took time out to check today and am happy to report that safe, sane, and fashionable shoes for women are now available. In fact, I bought a pair myself.

Send a gift after death

An outfit in Belgium offers for a fee to send gifts to your friends and relatives after you've died. Say you want your nephew, little Willie, to get a new T-shirt on his birthday for the next 10 years beyond your death, that can be arranged. A card will accompany it, too. How about: "To little Willie from his late Uncle Pete who just can't stand to say goodbye."

A veteran film director contends that actors who learn their scripts quickly also tend to remember their lines longer. The slow study, who takes all day to memorize a brief scene, is likely to forget it right after it's shot, says he.

If you prefer some sort of bird as your pet, you're most probably an introvert. Or so say the students of the mind.

More riding saddles are sold along the east coast than along the west coast, bear in mind.

MARTIN DRUNK

Q. "What's a 'Martin drunk'?"

A. That's No. 7 in the seven stages of drunkenness. No. 1, ape drunk, when a man makes a fool of himself. No. 2, lion drunk, when a man wants to fight with anybody. No. 3, swine drunk, when a man gets knee-walking commode-hugging sick. No. 4, sleep drunk, when a man passes out. No. 5, goat drunk, when a man becomes exceedingly romantic. No. 6, fox drunk, when a man thinks he's crafty. And No. 7, martin drunk, when a man drinks himself sober.

Q. "Isn't a woman with a college degree statistically less likely to get married?"

A. That's right, but once married, she's statistically more likely to stay that way.

Q. "How many different breeds of dog have a black tongue?"

A. Only one, the chow.

SUNGLASSES

Getting ready to buy a new pair of sunglasses? Here's how to tell if the lenses are undistorted: Turn them over with undersides up. Catch the reflection of a bar of light, such as from a neon or fluorescent tube. Move them so the reflection shifts back and forth across the lenses. If the image looks wiggly or wavy, that's bad, so put them back on the rack and test another pair.

Argument continues over why the Indians referred to hare liquor as "fire water." No, not because it burned the throat, as one client suggests. But because when it was spit into an open fire, it burned a blue flame. So insists our Language man, who's not always wrong.

Shortest, easiest, cross-country route in the western United States — the 2,000 miles of Oregon Trail — was a thoroughfare before white men ever set foot on it. Deer, antelope and bullalo laid it out.

Second dog not answer

DEAR DR. MILLER: Should my still-growing dog have another dog to keep her company? I work and she's alone all day, five days a week. I spend as much time as I can with her in the morning, and plenty of time with her evenings and weekends, but I'm sure she must get terribly bored during the day. Would such a companion make her a better pet and keep her out of mischief? — D.E.

DEAR D.E.: True, the working "mother" syndrome leaves too many dogs alone too long, too often. A companion canine means you'd have two bored dogs instead of one, but boredom would then be less of a problem for her than if she were left alone. She should be happier with a compatible canine chum, though this wouldn't necessarily make her a better pet.

She might, in fact, become less human-dependent. Nor would a companion prevent mischief; it would more likely mean the two would learn to share any bad habits bred of boredom. In short, a second dog won't solve any of YOUR problems, but your dog's days would be less dull.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We discovered our young cat had roundworms and we had them taken care of. Suddenly, it's occurred to me, though, that our canary might get them from the cat. Do they do this? — K.C.

DEAR K.C.: Cats and canaries seldom mix sufficiently to make cross-infestation with internal parasites a problem. (Actually, the canary would have more acute problems than worms should it be that chummy with a cat.) There's another good reason why your canary wouldn't be infested — canaries aren't bothered by roundworms. Psittacines, such as parakeets, are occasionally affected with ascarids (roundworms), but these would not be the same species of worm that affects the feline.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How do you kill fleas once and for all? Our family (pets and people) has a terrible time with them because they keep coming back. — D.K.

DEAR D.K.: It's not killed fleas coming back to haunt you that you have to worry about, it's the same or succeeding generations — but different fleas — that your pets are packing in. They might also be living and breeding on the premises. Pet-safe (and people-safe) flea killers must be used routinely and persistently. A "once and for all" flea treatment seldom works since there are so often new fleas — strays from another animal or from a nearby flea nest, waiting to take over.

Names going to the dogs

When a family gets a new dog, as mine recently did, it (family) faces a multitude of familiar problems — getting the mutt housebroken, keeping him off the neighbor's lawn, teaching him not to bite the postman (or the humane society officer).

Less familiar but just as important — and impossible — is the task of choosing a name for the little darling, a name that will suit the dog and every member of the family. (There is no such name.)

In my youth every dog was named Spot or Rover or Fido. I don't know why. But they were serviceable all-weather names for big dogs and little dogs, for smooth-haired mutts and shaggy hounds. Pedigreed dogs were a different matter, of course. When someone owns a dog for only one breed (race? species?) it has "papers," legal documents attesting that its Mommy and Daddy were the same general type.

If the owner has more than one such aristocrat, he has "kennels," and names them Briarcroft or Western Sunset, and the dog goes to shows under massive sobriquets like Briarcroft Mixmillian von Poppenburg XIV, or Western Sunset's Purvis de Chavannes of Fairhaven. (A friend of mine had a raggedy little Pekenese he called Itty Bits, but after attending the Westminster dog show in New York, he promptly renamed the purp Ming Toy XVIII.)

For the average mongrel, less imposing nicknames serve. You can't very well go to the door at supper time and bawl down the street, "Here Western Sunset's Purvis de Chavannes of Fiarhaven!"

But what do you call the newcomer, a fat, furry, nondescript creature of apparently limitless bladder capacity? You don't want Fuzzball or Waddles, because in a few months he will be a smooth-haired, long-legged stalker of newsboys and gas meter readers.

Number 1 son, on a literary kick, favors names like Zooey, Camus, Hobbit or Marty, possibly even Hannie Hill, if it's that kind of a dog. (If he's that kind of a boy.) Teen-age daughters choose Ringo, then run through Dylan, Denver, Elvis and the whole cast of America, Alice Cooper, Fleetwood Mac and The Strutters. Sometimes they sentimentalize off into Damascus Lad or Don Juan.

In the opinion of the small son, the names proposed by his sibblings "stink." Obviously the dog should be named Tom Seaver or Joe Namath or Catfish. There is also some thought given to 007, the Dog from K.E.N.N.E.L.

Wives, when the name for a dog comes up, are as variable and unpredictable as a tropical storm. They suggest pet names from their childhood, the names of their old flames and things like Mezamorphic and Strong Heart and Runcible.

If the Head-of-Household is smart, he will keep that head down during the long, acrimonious debate. His opinion is not sought nor desired; he only makes enemies by apparently laughable proposals. Ride out the storm with sealed lips, Dad. Sometimes the storms are pretty long. One dog lived with us for nine years and went to his honored grave known to all simply as "the dog."

I love dogs, even when they chew on my slippers and dampen my ardor and my rug, but choosing a name that suits every tribal member is a problem that would baffle the United Nations.

Dr. Lamb

On treating arthritis

DEAR DR. LAMB — Your comments on Motrin surprised me. I went to my doctor for arthritis in my knees (real bad). He gave me Motrin, I supposed, to help cure it. He is a man of few words and didn't comment. Your articles said it is strictly a pain reliever. I would like to have your Health Letter number 8-8, Aspirin and Related Medicine that you mentioned in your column about Motrin to find out more about these medicines.

Why is it so many doctors will not use cortisone shots in the knees for relief? When my husband (now dead) had painful knees from arthritis his doctor put cortisone in them and he had great relief for a long time but my doctor does not do that.

Thank you for your columns in our paper.

DEAR READER — You shouldn't be so surprised that Motrin is just a pain reliever in the treatment of degenerative arthritis. The truth is there is NO CURE for osteoarthritis (degenerative arthritis). In rheumatoid arthritis cures are rare and may simply be remissions of the disease. The purpose of treatment for the common forms of arthritis is to help control the disease if possible or to relieve pain so the person can live a more normal life.

Aspirin, Tylenol, Motrin and all of these medicines used in the treatment of osteoarthritis (degenerative arthritis) serve only to relieve pain. You may have seen TV ads stating that aspirin relieves inflammation. That is a half-truth. Its anti-inflammation action is accomplished with much larger doses than is used to relieve pain. The common amounts of aspirin and related medicines used without a doctor's supervision do not have any effective anti-inflammation action at all. Nevertheless, these medicines remain the best medicines available in the management of osteoarthritis.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-8 that you requested. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This issue contains a list of commonly used medicines that contain aspirin. This is important to anyone who has a problem taking aspirin for any reason.

One difficulty people have in understanding what doctors do is thinking that all joint problems are arthritis. Actually, arthritis involves the bone and cartilage. Inflammation of the membranes around a joint or the tendons is bursitis and tendonitis. These are often helped with cortisone injections because of its anti-inflammatory action. Because osteoarthritis is not an inflammatory disease but a degeneration of bone and cartilage simple osteoarthritis is not helped with cortisone injections. This means your husband probably had an inflammatory process in his knees and not just arthritis.

Cortisone is not used for osteoarthritis but it is used in selected cases of rheumatoid arthritis. This may provide temporary relief without inducing any real cure and may even cause undesirable side effects. So, it has to be used carefully in selected cases that cannot be better treated with other medications.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.)

Jacoby's bridge

Duke drops big bundle

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Some 200 years ago the Duke of Cumberland lost a good part of his ducal estates in a game of whist when he was dealt a hand similar to that held by West. The sad feature about the hand is that there is no way for West to take a trick.

In the Whist hand the Duke actually held four spades and led one. Without a spade lead we can't handle four trumps in the West hand so we only gave him three.

The play at seven spades doubled is short and simple. South ruffs the heart lead in dummy, ruffs a club, leads a trump, finesses, ruffs a club, leads a second trump, finesses again, ruffs one more club to set up the rest of the club suit, leads his last trump to pick up West's last trump and makes the last six tricks with little clubs.

It is a trifle hard to justify the bidding in contract, but if you are going to make up hands you are entitled to poetic license.

Incidentally, a writer named Sam Hellman used this hand in the Saturday Evening Post some years ago as the basis for a very funny bridge story.

Ask the Jacobys

Several readers have confused this hand with the Mississippi heart hand. In that hand the victim holds: ♠ — ♥ A K Q J 10 9 ♦ A K Q J ♣ A K Q and makes only his six top trumps in a heart contract. His one opponent holds all seven trumps and spades and scores the remaining seven tricks.

That hand was used in the old game of bridge in which all contracts were at the one level and hearts were the highest-ranking suit.

King unit hopes for comeback

ATLANTA (AP) — Young blacks say Martin Luther King Jr.'s old civil rights group has turned sluggish in the 1970s. They hope to steer it "back into the streets."

"That's the reason for our existence," Tyrone Brooks, 30, communications director for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said. "The movement belongs in the streets — protesting, going to jail, fighting for poor people...

"The NAACP represents the middle class, and the Urban League represents the super-intellectuals. They do a good job, and we shouldn't be trying to cover the same territory," he said.

"The SCLC should represent the people with no college degrees, the welfare mothers, the garbagemen."

The group will choose a new SCLC president Friday at the end of its annual convention. Brooks said he supports Georgia Rep. Hosea Williams, a black activist from Atlanta.

Brooks talks of a split between the activists, most of them young, and "a much older faction who are sedate, set in their ways."

Joseph Lowery, a Methodist minister who is acting president of the group King founded 20 years ago, downplays talk of a split.

Split or no split, SCLC leaders agree the organization's influence is not what it was before King was gunned down nine years ago while in Memphis, Tenn., to lead a protest march in support of garbagemen.

Brooks estimates the group has lost 30 per cent of its members since then. He ventures a rough guess of 100,000 current members — about one-fourth of them whites — in SCLC chapters or affiliated groups, but many are not closely involved in the organization's work.

"Dr. King never wanted memberships," Brooks said. He quoted the late civil rights leader as saying, "If you sell membership cards, they'll just sit on them and figure that's their contribution."

The "fire and spirit" of King's leadership are what SCLC needs now, Brooks said.

"I think quite honestly some people in the organization just gave up when Dr. King was killed. I love Dr. King, but we have to carry on," he said.

Both King's widow and father say they support SCLC — the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. is on its board of directors — but much of their time and energy goes to the growing Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change. The center also draws many dollars from traditional contributors to SCLC.

"It's unfortunate that people compete for the same funds from the same sources," Brooks said.

Contributions would increase if SCLC would "return to the streets," he predicted. "People aren't going to give you money unless they can see you're trying to do something."

Current plans include protests or possible court action in several southern court cases in which the SCLC feels blacks were unfairly convicted or accused.

Brooks also talks enthusiastically of "Operation Military," a project in which the SCLC is acting as a clearinghouse for complaints about racism in the armed forces.

Glacier bears in the clover

WEST GLACIER, Mont. (AP) — The roadside bear is just about a thing of the past at Yellowstone National Park. But its brethren at Glacier National Park are in eight miles of high clover now known as "bear alley."

The Park Service used clover to revegetate roadsides along a stretch of two-lane highway between the Apgar area and Camus Ranger Station. That was the the first mistake. Clover is a delicacy to bears.

"It's one thing we would change if we had it to do over again," said chief ranger Charles Sigler.

Blood pressure clinic

Kiwanis Club of Greater Pomona has sponsored a free blood pressure clinic the second Saturday of each month the past 15 months at Indian Hill Village, Pomona.

More than 3,500 people have been tested, according to project chairman Ben C. Sanford, and more than seven per cent of those tested have had elevated blood pressure and been advised to see their doctors.

Clinics are staffed with all-volunteer help. The Mt. San Antonio College School of Nursing sent nurses each Saturday. High school Keywanettes and Key Club members have volunteered many hours.

Sanford said this project will be carried on through the 1977-78 Kiwanis year at the same location. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The clinics are part of the Kiwanis "Save a Life" program being carried on by hundreds of clubs, Circle K groups, Key Clubs and Keywanettes in the California-Nevada-Hawaii District of Kiwanis International. Director of the project is Dr. Kenneth C. Forror of El Cajon.

Upland meeting slated

Residents of Upland are invited to participate in a public meeting to identify urgent needs of the city which may be covered under federal funding.

The meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Upland City Hall is sponsored by the Office of Community Development, according to Rodney A. Anderson, grants administrator for Upland.

Under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, Upland, by joint powering with San Bernardino County, is eligible to receive about $230,000 for local community projects which are designed to improve the living conditions for low and moderate income persons.

"We need the help of residents to identify and list needs within the community which may be covered by these Federal Community Development Block monies," said Anderson.

Persons interested in expressing their opinion, but unable to attend the meeting, may fill in a form which is available from Anderson at the Upland City Hall.

Smithsonian 'lied' about meteorite?

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Rep. Shirley Pettis, R-37th Dist., accused officials of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. of lying to her about circumstances surrounding recovery of the "Old Woman" meteorite in the San Bernardino Mountains recently.

Mrs. Pettis, appearing before the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors which is suing the fededal government in an effort to keep the huge 6,000-pound iron rock in Southern California, told the board that Smithsonian officials had "lied" to her when she inquired about the status of the meteorite.

"I was told the prospectors who found the meteorite had been offered a $5,000 finders fee for locating it," she said. "I later found out that wasn't true . . . It was a bold-faced lie!"

Mrs. Pettis, who is seeking federal legislation designed to modify the 1910 Antiquities Act that historically has given the Smithsonian Institution claims to all meteorites found in the U.S., said her battle against the huge museum is turning out to be a difficult one.

"When you're lied to it has the tendency to make this Irish girl want to come out fighting," she said of herself.

Calling the Smithsonian Institution as "awesome institution," Mrs. Pettis said she will not give up her fight to have the Antiquties Act changed so the "Old Woman" meteorite and other artifacts found in the future might remain in the places they are discovered.

The "Old Woman" meteorite was discovered several months ago in barren mountains near Twentynine Palms by three prospectors from the area.

The prospectors informed the Smithsonian Institution of their find and federal officials, with the help of the U.S. Marines, confiscated the huge iron rock from its location where it had lain dormant for thousands of years.

Removal of the rock by federal officials caused an immediate uproar in Southern California.

San Bernardino County supervisors unanimously protested actions by the federal Bureau of Land Management on whose land the meteorite was found. They asked Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus to rescind the action by federal officials until a hearing could be held to determine if the rock should remain in Southern California.

Of 14 large meteorites found in the Western U.S., only one — the Old Woman — remains west of the Mississippi River.

Both the state Attorney General's office and San Bernardino County attorneys went to court to keep the meteorite from being transported to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger's office was unsuccessful in getting an injunction, but county attorneys got a federal judge in Los Angeles to hear the matter. Officials are awaiting a decision in federal court on the case . . . although now the meteorite is in California because of a temporary restraining order issued by the court.

Preliminary redevelopment plan in La Verne accepted

The City of La Verne now has a preliminary plan for its Community Redevelopment Agency that takes in approximately 150 acres of downtown property.

The City Council, acting as the La Verne Redevelopment Agency, Monday night accepted the plan and authorized City Manager George Caswell to proceed with the formation of the permanent plan.

Boundaries of the redevelopment project are the city limits on the east and west, approximately Bonita Avenue on the north, and Puddingstone Drive and the area south of the Union Pacific Railroad tracks on the south.

As part of the project the redevelopment agency will decide what to do to keep the downtown business area vibrant and attractive, and how to keep the area south of the Santa Fe tracks from turning into a slum.

Acceptance of the preliminary plan was recommended by the city's Planning Commission.

Association won't cover Laetrile suits

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The association that insures over half of Nevada's doctors for malpractice says it won't cover lawsuits stemming from prescription of Laetrile, the controversial substance backers claim effective in treating cancer.

Nevada is one of several states in which doctors may prescribe Laetrile, though use of the substance has not been approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Nevada's Medical Liability Insurance Association, which writes about 60 per cent of the state's malpractice policies, ruled after the substance was legalized in the state its coverage would not extend to Laetrile. The exclusion covers all substance not approved by the FDA.

A survey of principal malpractice carriers around the country indicated none has plans for similar action.

However, Oklahoma, one of the other states in which prescription of Laetrile is legal, requires patients to agree to waive malpractice suits if Laetrile is prescribed at their request. Other states are considering similar requirements.

Dick Rottman, Nevada's insurance commissioner, said the NMLIA move is not a judgment on the value of Laetrile. While it may limit Laetrile prescriptions in the state, he said, the restriction was designed to keep the association from going broke.

Bob Byrd, who directs the NMLIA program, said, "If we took unnecessary risks, we would probably be in the same boat as other companies that went broke" in the malpractice insurance business.

Rottman said despite claims from Laetrile's backers, the FDA is recognized as the leading regulatory body for drugs and it's policies would weigh heavily in court in a suit involving Laetrile.

Argonaut Insurance Co., the other major malpractice carrier in Nevada, wouldn't say whether it might order a similar restriction.

But St. Paul Insurance Co., which provides malpractice coverage for about 36,000 doctors across the country, said it would not follow the Nevada association's lead. "That's telling medical specialists how to practice medicine. We wouldn't do that," said David McDonald, a St. Paul spokesman.

Bob Miller of the Medical Protective Co., which writes malpractice policies in the Midwest, said his firm also has no prohibition on Laetrile or other substances not approved by the FDA. "It realy becomes more a question of legality within a state. If it's permissible in a state, then we have coverage for them," he said. "We have no immediate changes planned."

Bob Norton of Aetna Life and Casualty Co., which insures 15,000 doctors in several states, said his firm won't exclude Laetrile. "Our primary function is to protect the policy holder if he's in a suit," Norton said. "Part of that function is to have the least number of exclusions. But it's not our intent to cover any illegal acts. We won't."

Love and marriage long distance

LA JOLLA (AP) — June and Robert Tapp are happily married, even though they live and work 2,000 miles apart. Of course, the telephone bill runs $250 a month.

After 26 years of living together, they split up professionally two years ago. Dr. June Louin Tapp became provost of Revelle College at the University of California at San Diego.

And Dr. Robert Tapp, 52, is still chairman of the Humanities department at the University of Minnesota.

The family house in Minnesota is "a very vacant place" when she goes home but the professional separation was approved by both daughters, the mother said in an interview.

"It may sound awkward, but it works for us," she said.

"We manage to see each other every three weeks during the school year, and we talk to each other every night on the telephone."

The Drs. Tapp are together in a rented house this summer in San Diego, and Mrs. Tapp moves into an apartment when the fall term begins. Her liberal arts college has 2,200 undergraduates.

Instead of spending this academic quarter at Minnesota, her husband will be a visiting professor at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

A daughter, Kami, is transferring her marine biology students from father's school to mother's. Mara, 21, recently earned a master's degree at the University of Chicago.

Commuting is nothing new to the family, who have worked in Denmark, Switzerland, India and Yugoslavia.

When Dr. June Louin Tapp was a fellow in law and psychogogy at Harvard, her husband taught at the University of Chicago.

"I think we appreciate each other more," the local Dr. Tapp said.

Today the 48-year-old provost is as busy as on that weekend when they married in her junior year in college. That weekend she was also tapped for Phi Beta Kappa and the Mortar Board and was named one of the 50 outstanding young women in the nation by Mademoiselle magazine.

Being apart from your spouse is incidental, she says—the important thing is "what happens when people really get together. There is a spark with us that makes it all worthwhile."

Narc, narc, who's there?

ENFIELD, Conn. (AP) — To many high school students, Police Sgt. Leo Arnone, head of Enfield's two-man narcotics squad, seems to be everywhere. He may be when a T-shirt bearing his image goes on sale.

The shirt first appeared last week and the muscular detective with the shaven head got one. He likes it. Under his picture on the shirt are the words: "Narc, Narc, who's there?"

The only above-ground outlet for the shirts is Peggy Cartwright, who is selling them for $4.50 each. She is very evasive about the T-shirt designer and who is making them.

She says the idea was hatched in "a spirit of fun" by several persons, including herself.

Joyce Brothers

Victims of divorce

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Three years ago when my wife and I were divorced, she was awarded custody of our two children, a boy of 5 and a girl of 7. She has since remarried and moved to another city. I have also remarried. The problem is our daughter, now 10, who is quite unhappy with her stepfather and wishes to come live with me. I am perfectly agreeable, although I fear my ex-wife will cause trouble, possibly even resorting to the courts. I could even bear that, but my concern is for the welfare of my child. Should she be put through the hassle? — C. McK.

DEAR C. McK.: Unfortunately, children of divorced parents can be likened to refugees caught between the barrages and sniping of opposing armies. They are savaged back and forth, not knowing where to turn for protection and indelibly scarred by the traumatic experience.

There is no reason your daughter shouldn't be able to live with you if an amicable agreement can be worked out with your ex-wife. You can provide a home, with your new wife as a substitute mother. Even if you were unmarried, the days when a judge deemed a mother the logical guardian are gone.

As you mention, the true concern is for the well-being of the child. It should be obvious to her mother that she is unhappy with her stepfather. This can be a plus in your favor and should be stressed in discussions with your ex-wife. If she has your daughter's welfare at heart she should appreciate the anguish the child is going through.

Neither of you should try to undermine her further by nasty allusions to the other. She is undoubtedly confused enough in her allegiances and deeply disturbed by the break-up of what she viewed as the solidity of a home and family. Now there are two.

By all means try to work something out without additional contention. Even if the child is not party to the problems, she will sense something is wrong. Perhaps a trial period of a few months in your home, with liberal visitation rights, will calm the child and help all of you decide where her best interests are — with you or her mother.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: We have been married just a few months and I am terribly in love with my husband. However, I cringe whenever he wants to have relations. He has been understanding — attributing my reluctance to shyness and inexperience. The fact is that I would like to be a loving wife but an incestuous assault by an uncle when I was a teenager has made me afraid of sex ever since. I've been ashamed to tell my husband for fear he'd think the less of me. On the other hand, I don't know how much longer his patience will last. — C.C.

DEAR C.C.: Incest is one of mankind's oldest taboos. Yet it is more widespread than most people realize. Only recently have social behaviorists begun to recognize the extent to which many youngsters have been sexually abused. As with you, fear is the most compelling factor in keeping the incident quiet.

Your emotional quandry is understandable. The traumatic effect of forced intimacy with someone normally considered a protector — a father, uncle, brother, family friend — can be most devastating on a young girl (or boy). Concern with her own embarrassment, as well as dread at the consequences for the perpetrator can make the victim harbor the resentment and shame within herself. The long-range effect is an inability to cope with one's innate desires in relation to the horrendous memory.

The mental scars of incest heal far less quickly than those of the physical mistreatment. Professional help is definitely called for, even before confession to your husband. Most probably the psychiatrist or psychologist, in time, will talk to your husband, preparing the way for an open discussion between you two.

Your letter indicates a deep desire for your husband and the healthiness of your marriage. Don't delay. Seek assistance.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market drifted lower Wednesday. Traders sold in reaction to rising interest rates. Bargain hunters found some attractive prices among the glamors. Trading was moderate.

Analysts said the Federal Reserve Board's recent credit tightening has raise the prospect the board will raise its discount rate. That would lead to a boost in the prime lending rate by the nation's major banks.

With money tougher to obtain, the economy will slow down, analysts said. A slowing trend has appeared in government reports on its leading economic indicators and on industrial production.

Early in the day, the Commerce Department reported business inventories rose 0.7 per cent in June, slower than the 1.0 per cent hike in May. Also, business sales rose 0.2 per cent.

Against that background, the Dow Jones industrial average was off 2.51 points to 866.77 shortly before noon EDT. Declines outnumbered advances, 555 to 474, among the 1,560 issues crossing the tape.

New York Stock Exchange volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 7,800,000 shares, compared with 8,620,000 traded during the comparable period Tuesday.

Middle South Utilities was the most active NYSE issue, up ⅛ to 16⅞. Champion International was second, off ⅛ to 19⅜. PepsiCo was third, off ¼ to 25⅜.

UAL Inc. was the fourth most active issue, unchanged at 17⅞ in trading that included a block of 100,000 shares at 17¾.

Babcock & Wilcox, whose directors favor a tender offer by J. Ray McDermott, was ahead ⅜ in active trading. McDermott stock was ahead ⅛.

Prices were mixed in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. Ryan Homes was the most active Amex issue, off ¼ to 17¼. Great Basins Petroleum followed, off ⅛ to 7⅜. Ranger Oil & Exploration was third, off ⅛ to 24½.

Firm reports profits down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oh, what big teeth you had, "Jaws."

MCA Inc. reported Tuesday that income during the first half of this year was 20 per cent less than the first six months of 1976, when profits were spurred by the thriller film "Jaws."

Gains in television production were offset by lower income from theatrical movies, records and music publishing, according to the company, owner of Universal Studios.

Net income for the corporation in the six months ending June 30 was $35.1 million, compared with $44.3 million during the same period a year earlier. Earnings per share between the two reporting periods dropped from $2.46 in 1976 to $1.95, the company said.

But revenues rose to $382.8 million, a three per cent increase over 1976, MCA reported.

Senate panel gets confusing issue

Economic dispute moves from campus to D.C.

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A dispute between two professors has confused a lot of people who thought they understood the stock market, and probably has loosed their already limp grip on the laws of economics and statistics, if not physics.

The hassle has moved from the campus to Washington, where it will be considered by a Senate subcommittee on possible pension fund legislation. And so, therefore, some legislative aids might lose their grip too.

The question is this: Does the concentration of buying-selling by institutions, especially of Morgan Guaranty Trust, the biggest pension trust manager, directly affect the prices of stocks?

In testimony last year, Prof. Roy A. Schotland of Georgetown University Law School said, yes, institutional trading does affect prices. The impact, he said, was adverse, hurting pension beneficiaries and other investors.

Morgan Guaranty didn't like that conclusion, and so hired Prof. David W. Miller of Columbia University, a highly respected statistician and consultant. He disagreed, emphatically.

"There is no indication that Morgan Guaranty's trading had any effect on stock price changes," said Miller. "Professor Schotland's statistical study as it is designed cannot sustain the conclusions he draws from it."

Reached in West Virginia by the New York Times, Schotland countered by declaring Miller's methodology imperfect. "It will come apart" upon further study, he said, in effect hurling Miller's accusation right back at him.

That trading by an investor of Morgan's size — it accounted for 38.5 per cent of all buying in Kaiser Aluminum in 1975 — would not affect a stock price "defies logic and the most elementary supply and demand laws of economics," he said.

Most investors, it seems fair to say, would be inclined to side with Schotland, or otherwise concede that their understanding of the market, their vocation or avocation, was as scrambled as their knowledge of statistics.

Is it even conceivable, they asked, that an investors with 600 pension trust accounts and tens of millions of dollars to invest, would have no impact on prices?

Doesn't this contradict the law of supply and demand? Newton's laws of motion? If you pounded a board with a hammer, a ball with a bat or a stock with a sell order — isn't it all the same?

Miller was called at his vacation home on the northeast tip of Cape Breton and asked about his comment that "there is no indication of any trading effect on stock prices in the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. data ..."

A patient, gracious man, he explained that in a huge market place even large transactions can be absorbed over time without noticeable impact.

But, said the puzzled questioner, wary at this point of his own understanding, doesn't there have to be some effect, even if statistical analysis cannot detect it?

"I have no knowledge to the contrary," he replied. Surprised, the questioner took one timid step forward.

"There would be an impact, then?"

"There would be an impact, then?"

"I assume so," said the professor. "You could almost be certain."

"There would, then, be a response from the market?"

"You would imagine there would be."

The confusion, it appears, arises from the framework in which the earlier "no impact" statements were made, and that framework in turn resulted from the manner in which the study was structured.

Miller followed the structure of Schotland's study, at least in some respects, and that study covered a time period of a full quarter. Over that time, Miller said, there was no measurable impact on prices.

Why? Because the market was able to absorb the trading. For a day or two, he agreed, there might be a price impact, but then "other investors will perceive the price change as a market distortion and act to take advantage of it." In other words, offset it.

So there is, thank goodness, a price impact, and our understanding of the market mechanism, and indeed of our little universe, isn't totally naive.

That, however, doesn't resolve the dispute between the two professors. The Senators will have to deal with that. But not immediately. They too are vacationing.

GOP win may prove hollow in long run

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republicans who rallied behind the banner of party loyalty to beat public financing of Senate elections this week won a major legislative victory, but their own party may be the real loser in the long run.

Every available study indicates that private campaign financing for which the Republicans fought so hard overwhelmingly favors the Democrats.

There are all the old myths about the Republicans being the party of big business and big money, but the practical facts of life in modern politics give congressional Democrats the best chance at private campaign money.

This is based on two elemental facts.

—Democrats outnumber Republicans by about 2 to 1 in Congress.

—Most of the private money donated to political campaigns goes to incumbents.

Despite the lingering beliefs that labor money goes automatically to Democrats and business money to Republicans, the fact is that the smart money follows its best interests more often than its heart.

The average political contribution from the big money sources is aimed at courting a winner far more often than toward making a winner of an ideological or partisan friend. This usually translates into giving money to a powerful incumbent rather than taking a chance on a challenger.

Equally mythical is the idea that the GOP gets all the money it needs from "fat cat" contributors. For all practical purposes the "fat cat" of yesteryear is out of the game. He can still give, up to $25,000 total, but not more than $1,000 to any one candidate, and that can't buy much or help all that much.

The new force in campaign finance is the political action committee, or PAC in the jargon. Committees can give up to $5,000 to a candidate, and spread those $5,000 beneficencies among members of a congressional committee with considerable effect.

These special interest groups contributed almost $22.6 million to congressional candidates last year, almost double their 1974 gifts. And any way you look at it, this money favored incumbents and Democrats.

In contested congressional elections involving an incumbent, the incumbents received $13.2 million from special interest groups, compared to $4.1 million for their challengers.

That's a 3-1 edge over-all for the predominantly Democratic incumbents, but the ratios can go even higher when broken down into the various special interests.

Money from agricultural groups favored incumbents 7 to 1. Business groups, despite their generally presumed GOP preference, went 4 to 1 for incumbents regardless of party. Health groups favored office holders against outsiders by 3.5 to 1. Labor went for incumbents 3 to 1.

Approached another way, PACs associated with the securities industry, surely, the popular wisdom would say, friendly to the party of J. P. Morgan, gave $177,000 to congressional incumbents last year, and only $7,600 to challengers.

Likewise, PACs of the American Dental Association gave $288,000 to incumbents and $41,000 to challengers.

The simple law of averages says that if campaign donors favor incumbents and more incumbents are Democrats than Republicans the Democrats have to come out ahead. But it can be measured from another angle.

Maritime related unions, for example, gave $104,338 to members of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries who were running for reelection in 1976. Democrats got $98,438 of it.

Dairy interests gave $205,986 to members of the House Agriculture Committee last year, and Democrats got $181,225 of that.

The little chameleon is famous for changing colors. Some can change to yellow, green, brown, red, or even black.

The chameleon has in its skin special cells which contain coloring matter. These color cells are controlled by changes in temperature, light, and especially the chameleon's emotions, and they produce the color changes by growing bigger or smaller.

During cool nights, the chameleon may be a very pale color. During the warm light of day, the color cells expand.

The darker colors spread throughout the cells, masking the lighter colors with greens and browns. When the chameleon becomes frightened or angry, its nervous system sends a message to those cells.

Fright causes the darker colors to shrink back, allowing the paler colors to show. Anger brings brighter shades.

So temperature, light, and the chameleon's mood cause the color changes, and not the color of its surroundings.

Notorious dud 'Edsel' is beauty to aficionados

OXFORD, Pa. (AP) — Hugh Lesley is preserving the Edsel, the automotive industry's most notorious dud, whose quick death came when the Ford Motor Co. canceled production in 1959.

Lesley claims to own the world's biggest collection of the ill-fated cars. Over 90 convertibles, hardtops and station wagons in various physical condition dot his 400-acre corn farm in Lancaster County.

"It's not a graveyard. No Edsel is dead," said Lesley, a persistent man who failed to accept history's treatment of the Edsel.

"There are lots of car collectors. Everybody has their own tastes. Ours just happens to be in the Edsel line," he shrugged.

Lesley built a 40-by 130-foot shop to house his orphans. A big "E" from an extinct Edsel dealership adorns the garage. Hubcaps, spare engine parts and other memorabilia line the walls.

Twenty-five of his cars still run. The other clunkers are scattered in a nearby grove. They offer spare parts to keep their more fortunate brethren on the road.

Like people who treasure rare oddities such as a stamp with a number upside down, Lesley enjoys dabbling with his toys. At night or during the winter months, he tinkers with the engines or does body work.

"We work on them when we have time and do all the work ourselves. It's no fun going out and buying a car that's all ready to go. It's fun to put them together," Lesley said.

The last of the 110,847 Edsels produced in 2½ years came off the assembly line Nov. 17, 1959. The car, named after the late Edsel Henry Ford, was envisioned as a unique product.

Its most distinctive feature was a split front bumper with a horse collar grill, which later became the butt of many jokes. It was irreverently referred to as "a nosemobile sucking a lemon."

Its four models — Ranger, Pacer, Corsair and Citation — also came in wild color schemes like black and orange or copper, black and white.

But the car, priced in the $3,500 range, never caught on. Ford reportedly lost $350 million before abandoning the venture.

When production ceased, Lesley, a practical man, figured it would be a good buy as a family car.

"I told my wife, 'Let's get an Edsel. They're so chep.' They were purchased for around $25.

About 20,000 Edsels are still registered, most owned by the 2,000 members of the Edsel Owners of America. That nationwide organization of loser lovers meets once a year to show off cars and spin yarns.

When the group meets in Kansas City late this summer, Lesley will drive up in his 1958 Pacer convertible. The pink and white beauty, which he purchased at a sheriff's sale 10 years ago for $150, is his pride and joy. It would bring about $5,000 if it were for sale now.

"People don't miss us. They see us coming," Lesley said. "A lot of people study it to figure out what it is. There's surprise ... and disbelief."

Soviet citizens debate nation's new constitution

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of Soviet citizens are bombarding newspapers and government agencies with opinions on the nation's new constitution, published in draft form in June for a "nationwide discussion" in the official media.

One of the most debated issues is an article on equal rights for women, similar to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The arguments recall the U.S. controversy, but without the massive public campaigns and demonstrations.

On other issues, some citizens propose measures stricter than those in the draft: One man suggests punishment for able-bodied citizens who don't work, for example.

Westerners following the newspaper and television debates have seen no sign that any fundamental objections to the 9,000-word document are being aired.

The constitution, the nation's fourth, was first proposed in 1959 by the late Nikita S. Khrushchev but was not released in draft form until last June 4. The document is to be adopted in the Soviet parliament by Nov. 7, the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The constitution repeats past guarantees of press, speech and religious freedom. But it adds that these freedoms must not be used to "injure the interests of society and the state."

Far from protesting such qualifications on freedom, many recent letter-writers have called for even stricter requirements on citizens to serve the Soviet Union. L. Sokolov from Soviet Kirghizia wrote a letter suggesting the following addition to the constitution:

"The interests of the state come before everything. Every citizen of the U.S.S.R ... is obliged to put the interests of the state first in all his activities."

N. Burakova, a chemical worker from Krasnoyarsk, said the constitution should provide that "every citizen able to work, but who shirks activity useful to society, will be punished by law."

Article 35 says that "in the U.S.S.R. women shall have equal rights with men."

Typical of many letters was one from V. Kutsy, a factory locksmith from Odessa, who said women's equality is guaranteed by other articles in the constitution, and that a special article on women "intentionally or not puts women in a certain privileged position" — a familiar argument in the United States.

A lawyer wrote that accused persons should be guaranteed a right to a lawyer while still in detention pending the drawing up of criminal charges. This right does not now exist.

Others suggested that the constitution stop the practice of referring complaints back to the very officials who are being complained about.

Some letters reflect concern with living conditions or economic conditions. One man wrote that the constitution's guarantee of "housing" should be rewritten to guarantee "good housing." A composer, noting that a good violin bow can now cost more than $200, said the state should guarantee more material help to the arts.

Key to 'no sweat' cooking means don't turn on oven

Progress Bulletin
Food
Pomona, California ■ Wednesday, August 17, 1977

Freely translated, "no sweat" means easily done or handled, but in the midst of summer good cooks look for ways to take it literally. Keeping food cool as well as simple is the key to "no sweat" cooking!

Forget complicated, time consuming recipes and don't turn on the oven. Make good use of ready to eat foods such as convenient canned meat spreads, cheeses, fresh fruits and vegatables. They can be turned into some very interesting summer eating, whatever the occasion.

For example, a traditional macaroni salad becomes a refreshing main dish with the addition of hearty chunky chicken spread. Bits of chopped apple, slivered toasted almonds and a dash of curry powder complete the transition from ordinary to original.

Make the salad in the morning, before the heat of the day, and it will be well chilled and flavorful by evening. Add a cold vegetable such as marinated asparagus and rolls with butter for a delightful summer supper.

Surprise everyone with Spicy Ham 'n Cheese Rolls instead of cold cuts for lunch. Stir up a mixture of deviled ham, chopped stuffed olives, green pepper, pickle relish and mayonnaise. Serve it on split onion rolls topped with sliced cheese.

Looking for an easygoing but elegant hors d'oeuvre? Our Patio Pate combines crumbled bacon, scallions, butter and cream cheese with convenient canned liverwurst. It's perfect with extra crisp sesame seed crackers or melba toast ant tall icy drinks.

In a bowl mix together macaroni, chicken spread, chopped apple and mayonnaise. Stir in almonds, onion, lemon juice, curry powder and salt. Chill. Serve in lettuce cups. Makes 4 servings.

SPICY HAM 'N CHEESE ROLLS

2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons sweet pickle relish
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
6 onion rolls, split
6 slices American cheese

NUTMEG CARROTS

The flavor combination is worthwhile.

4 cups loosely packed coarsely grated pared carrot
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Salt to taste

In a medium saucepan, covered, rapidly cook the carrot and water until carrots are tender — 15 to 20 minutes. If necessary, add a little water during the cooking period; if water is left when carrots are cooked, evaporate it or pour it off. Stir in the remaining ingredients. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

A DOZEN CREPES

Because they're made with corn starch, they have fewer calories than when made with flour.

¾ cup milk
2 large eggs
1/3 cup cornstarch
1 tablespoon corn oil
¾ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

In an electric blender whirl together at high speed until smooth the milk, eggs, cornstarch, oil, baking powder and salt. Into a hot, greased non-stick 6 or 7-inch skillet measured across the bottom pour about 2 tablespoons batter — a long-handled standard coffee measure is fine for measuring and pouring. Off heat, swirl batter so it covers bottom of skillet. Over medium heat cook until top dries around edges — about 30 seconds. Turn and cook other side for a few seconds. Repeat with remaining batter. Store crepes between layers of wax paper in refrigerator or freezer. Makes 12.

LOTS OF BROWNIES

We've given one of our favorite recipes a new flavor twist.

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1/3 cup molasses, preferably light
1 cup butter, at room temperature
1/3 cup light corn syrup
6 large eggs
6 squares (6 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, melted
2 cups flour, stir to aerate before measuring
2 cups coarsely chopped walnuts

Stir together the sugars, corn syrup, molasses and butter; stir in eggs, one at a time, until blended. Stir in chocolate, add flour and combine. Stir in 1½ cups of the nuts. Turn into an ungreased 15½ by 10½ by 1-inch jellyroll pan. Sprinkle with remaining nuts. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 40 minutes; surface should be very dark but not scorched. Cool completely on wire rack. Cut into squares and remove.

EASY POT ROAST

Repeated by request.

2½ pound boneless chuck beef roast, excess fat removed
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ teaspoon paprika
1 can (8 ounce) stewed tomatoes
½ cup catsup
½ cup water
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Large onion, cut in thin strips

Rub meat with a mixture of the salt, chili powder and paprika. Place in a preheated casserole into which it just fits. Stir together the remaining ingredients and add. Cover tightly and bake in a preheated 350 degree oven until tender — 2 to 2½ hours. Remove the meat and cut into sections. Skim the fat from the sauce and pour over meat. Makes 6 servings.

Turn those leftovers into tasty citrus ham balls

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Leftovers come in many disguises. Next time you serve ham turn some of the leftovers into a different and tasty citrus ham ball dish. Serve this with rice and a citrus sauce.

Another taste-bud stimulator is a side dish of lemon-glazed carrots and green grapes. Serve this with fish or your favorite poultry dish.

CITRUS HAM BALLS

2 eggs
½ cup orange juice
3 cups fine soft bread crumbs
2 cups ground cooked ham
1 tablespoon minced onion
¼ cup chopped parsley
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon dried leaf sage
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
Hot cooked rice

Beat eggs in medium bowl. Add orange juice and bread crumbs. Mix well and let stand 5 minutes. Add ham, onion, parsley, orange rind, dry mustard and sage; mix well. Shape into 18 meatballs about 1 inch in diameter. Heat butter in skillet. Add meatballs and brown lightly on all sides. Add to Citrus Sauce (recipe follows). Serve with hot cooked rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Citrus Sauce

3 tablespoons cornstarch
3 cups orange juice
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon minced onion
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon dried leaf sage
¼ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon vinegar
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup raisins
2 Florida oranges, sectioned

Blend cornstarch with a small amount of the orange juice in a saucepan. Add remaining orange juice, sugar, onion, salt, dry mustard, sage, ginger, vinegar, pepper and raisins. Mix well and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add orange sections.

To section oranges, cut off peel round and round, spiral fashion. Go over fruit again, removing any remaining white membrane. Cut along side of each dividing membrane from outside middle of core. Remove section by section over bowl to retain juice from fruit.

LEMON-GLAZED CARROTS AND GREEN APPLES

8 carrots, scrapped
4 teaspoons lemon juice
4 teaspoons butter or margarine
½ cup sugar
1 1/3 cups halved and seeded green grapes
Mint sprigs, optional

Cut carrots into slender 1-inch strips. Place in thick two and one-half-quart saucepan. Cover bottom of pan one-fourth inch deep with water. Cover tightly and steam over medium heat until nearly done, about 10 to 15 minutes. Add lemon juice, butter and sugar. Cook briefly to reduce liquid and glaze carrots with syrup. Add grapes and heat briefly. Turn carrots into serving dish and garnish with mint. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Barbecue beans to serve on the grill

The barbecue grill has become a permanent fixture in homes all over the country. It provides a simple but fun mealtime activity for the whole family.

The American barbecue actually began in the Nineteenth Century as a political event. Speeches and lively music filled the air as roasted meat, homemade bread and beer were distributed among the crowd. Although some barbecues still involve large gatherings, most consist of a few family members and friends grilling hamburgers or steaks in the backyard. The casual, impromptu atmosphere of a barbecue makes it one of America's best forms of entertaining.

The next time you grill hamburgers or frankfurters make a batch of Barbecued Beans to serve with them. This delicious recipe has the added flavor and texture of chopped cocktail peanuts.

BARBECUED BEANS

2 cans (1 pound each) pork and beans with tomato sauce
½ cup chopped Cocktail Peanuts
1/3 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
2 tablespoons catsup
2 tablespoons dark molasses
4 slices uncooked bacon

Combine pork and beans, chopped cocktail peanuts, light brown sugar, catsup and molasses in a 1-quart casserole. Mix well. Arrange bacon on top of beans. Bake uncovered in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 15 minutes or until browned and bubbling. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Product labeling urged

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The federal government is trying to take some of the guesswork out of shopping by encouraging manufacturers to provide labels telling consumers everything from how well a product performs to how much noise it makes.

Most of the programs are still in their infancy, but officials said efforts will be made to avoid overlapping labels and duplication of information.

The latest move is a Commerce Department program on performance. The program, which is strictly voluntary on the part of the manufacturers, is designed to give information on such things as load capacity, strength and durability so shoppers are better able to compare competing models and brands of appliances and other products.

The data will be provided by manufacturers on the basis of tests developed by the Commerce Department's National Bureau of Standards. The government itself will not do the actual testing.

Other federal programs in the area of product information include a proposal by the Environmental Protection Agency for noise labels and efforts by the Federal Energy Administration to help shoppers learn about operating costs and energy consumption of appliances.

Thus far, the performance labeling project is limited to a one-year pilot program which began June 24. The first step, according to officials, is to decide which products should be labeled and both consumers and manufacturers have been asked for suggestions.

The government hopes to develop labels for between one and three products in the first year. At the end of the 12-month period, the results will be evaluated so officials can decide whether to continue the program.

Robert Mills of the Office of Product Standards said last week that the office was still collecting comments, but hoped to have recommendations ready for Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps within a few weeks.

"We would then publish proposed labels and proposed fees," Mill said. The labels will include a Department of Commerce logo.

Simple sandwich can be just that . . . or gourmet's delight

"A loaf of bread, a jug of wine and thou beside me . . ."

What do you suppose Omar Khayyam was referring to in this famous passage from his Rubaiyat? Perhaps, the joys of the sandwich — had it existed at that time.

But the sandwich doesn't date back quite as far as Omar Khayyam. We do know, however, that people were enjoying sandwiches by the end of the eighteenth century. History tells us that in 1765 John Montagu, Fourth Earl of Sandwich, known to have always been in a rush, came up with the idea for a compact meal between two slices of bread. Evidently, too rushed to think of a name, he lent it his own.

His idea spread quickly. By 1866, a Glasgow confectioner was advertising over 100 different kinds of sandwiches and today, Oskar Davidsen's of Denmark, one of the most famous sandwich restaurants, advertises over 200 different kinds of "smorrebrod" — the traditional Danish open sandwich.

Some of the gourmet delights offered at Oskar Davidsen's include eel with scrambled eggs, spinach, fried mushrooms and puree of smoked salmon with raw egg yolk, horseradish and onion. Of course not all of them are quite this original.

Here in the United States, the sandwich is often passed off as tuna on rye or peanut butter and jelly for the kid's lunchbox. Yet the possibilities for creativity are limitless. Certainly everyone is familiar with the role of the sandwich as a midday or midnight snack. Take all the leftovers in the refrigerator, spoon on some mayonnaise and place it all between two slices of bread . . . and there you have it, the ever-favorite Dagwood Sandwich. Such marathon combinations prepared on rolls are known by different names in various sections of the country — the submarine, the hero, the wedge, the hoagie and the grinder.

Sandwiches are very adaptable to informal entertaining. Buffet dinners are perfect times to allow your guests to create their own sandwiches out of their favorite combinations of meats, cheeses, vegetables and condiments. All they will need is a little imagination and enough daring to try anything.

What mahy people in this country do not realize is the potential of the sandwich for true gourmet dining. With very little effort, a hostess can serve her bridge club or evening guests open shrimp sandwiches made with a few drops of Tia Maria or a Croquemonsieur, the French version of a ham and cheese sandwich, yet as far removed from the American style as 3,000 miles of ocean.

Afternoon visits with friends call for tea sandwiches with the crusts cut off to save on calories. Try a thin layer of cream cheese with sliced olives or tomatoes or, for a unique combination, salmon with a dash of Peter Heering.

Sandwiches, open or closed, hot or cold, meat or fish, are always a welcome addition to a menu and offer broad opportunities to the cook with lots of imagination . . . and little time. Here are some suggestions for sandwich recipes with an international flair.

CROQUEMONSIEUR

4 ounces Gruyere cheese
¼ cup milk
1 teaspoon melted butter
2 teaspoons soy sauce
1 teaspoon mustard
1 tablespoon Courvoisier Cognac
4 slices boiled ham
8 slices cracked wheat bread
Butter for frying

Grate cheese and mix with milk, butter, soy sauce, mustard and Courvoisier until it is of spreading consistency. Makes 4 sandwiches, using ¼ of cheese mixture and 1 slice of ham for each. Saute in butter until golden brown on each side. Serve immediately.

CHERRY-CHEESE SANDWICH

2 large containers of whipped cream cheese
2 bottles maraschino cherries, cut and partially drained
¼ cup Peter Heering

Mix cream cheese and cherries in blender until consistency is even. Add Peter Heering. Blend another few seconds. Serve on Pumpernickel rounds.

TUNA SOUR

2 cans drained, white tuna
1 onion, chopped
2 celery stalks, diced
¼ cup chives
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup sour cream
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Chop onion and celery into tuna. Mix mayonnaise, sour cream and chives together in separate bowl and then add to tuna mix. Add lemon and blend together. Serve on seeded onion rolls.

PEANUT BUTTER DRAMBUIE

1 large jar peanut butter, any style
¼ cup Drambuie
5 strips cooked bacon
Rye bread strips

HAWAIIAN TUNA

2 cans drained, white tuna
½ cup mayonnaise
2 diced celery stalks
4 slices white bread
Butter
4 slices American cheese
1 can (or fresh) drained pineapple rings

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Add mayonnaise and celery to tuna in a bowl. Mix well. Spread tuna mixture on buttered white bread slices. Cover each one with one slice American cheese and one pineapple ring. Place on tray in oven and cook for about 10 minutes until cheese bubbles and sandwich is hot. Serve immediately.

Van Camp's. One of America's great simple pleasures.

Nothing's easier on hostess than delicious summer punch

"At the punch bowl's brink, let the thirsty think . . ."

And if you think of punch as something to be served only at backyard buffets, you're missing many a delicious Summertime happening — in a bowl.

Nothing is more delectable, or easier on the hostess, than a cooling punch served at a luncheon, a dinner, a gala soiree, or even on a picnic, where it can be easily transferred from the bowl to the thermos, or can be mixed right at the picnic site in a washtub!

Punch, by the way, has nothing to do with British wit. Nor does it come from the name of one half of that famous battling duo of puppets. Rather, punch derives its name from the Hindu, "pac," meaning five. Signifying the five ingredients that originally constituted the beverage (tea, water, sugar, lemon juice and arak, a raw spirit from the Orient), punch was concocted in the West Indies by the British expatriates. Some say that the Spaniards before them were the first to create the recipe for this "party drink." According to David Sandeman of Sandeman Wines in Jarnac, Spain, the Spaniards of the mid-seventeenth century were making "punches" using a spirit in its infant stage of distillery, rum. Today, rum is a principle ingredient in many fine punches . . . Planter's Punch, Tea Punch and Fish House Punch, just to name a few.

"Be thou well" is the Anglo-Saxon message that hails from the Wassail Bowl, the primitive punch bowl that was a feature of old-English yuletide feasts. Your guests will enjoy running their cuppeths over with the good cheer that comes from your hearty bowl of punch.

Here are some recipes for festive punches for everyone from age five to ninety-five.

CHILDREN'S PUNCHES

2 quarts milk
1 cup chocolate syrup

Mis together in a cookie jar (with cookies replaced by a large block of ice).

Fruit Punch

2 pints cranberry juice
1 pint orange juice
Juice of 2 lemons
1 quart ginger ale

Mix over a block of ice in a punch bowl.

ADULT PUNCHES

Breakfast Ambrosia (for those who have been up and are not just getting up)

1 tenth bottle Courvoisier
1 fifth bottle Porto Branco
2 quarts cold, strong, black coffee

Mix over crushed ice in a silver punch bowl.

Blushing Luncheon Punch

2 bottles (12 oz. each) red wine
1 bottle (12 oz.) Sandeman Ruby Port
1 bottle (12 oz.) Peter Heering
Juice of 6 oranges
Juice of 4 lemons
¼ pound powdered sugar
1 quart club soda
Assorted fresh fruit slices

Mix all ingredients except club soda and fruit in a large bowl over a block of ice. Add 1 quart of club soda. Float fresh fruit slices on the surface and serve.

May Wine

2/3 cup dried or fresh woodruff
2 bottles (fifths) Porto Branco
1 bottle (fifth) Peter Heering
3 tablespoons sugar
1 basket strawberries
½ cup orange juice
1 bottle (26 oz.) champagne

Steep woodruff wine and Peter Heering for 30 minutes. Add sugar and strain into a chilled punch bowl. Add strawberries. Pack bowl in chopped ice. Add orange juice and champagne just before serving. (Dried woodruff by the way, is the legendary herb that "cures all ills").

Sunshine Picnic Punch

1 gallon grapefruit juice
1 gallon orange juice
1 quart Drambuie
½ quart Courvoisier

Mix all ingredients in a punch bowl and pour into thermos, or mix at picnic site in metal punch bowl or clean washtub with a block of ice.

Come-in-out-of-the-rain Picnic Punch

2 quarts applejack
4 jiggars grenadine
1 pint orange juice
2 quarts ginger ale

Mix all ingredients together, adding ginger ale just before serving. Mix over block of ice in large punch bowl.

Fiesta Dessert Punch

6 quarts club soda
1 bottle (22 oz.) Tia Maria
1 box cinnamon sticks
Grated lemon and orange peel

Combine soda and Tia Maria. Break cinnamon sticks in half and put in with punch. Freeze ice cubes with grated lemon and orange peel and float in punch bowl.

Pink Champagne Punch (for the dusk to dawn set)

Cover 2 pounds of strawberries with sugar until all berries are lightly sprinkled. Let stand several hours at room temperature. Place a cake of ice in a crystal or silver punch bowl and pour in strawberries. Add one 26 ounce bottle pink champagne. Add 2 ounces Sciarada. Let stand until mixture becomes a lovely shade of pink. Serve.

Chocolate Punch

2 quarts milk
1 cup chocolate syrup
1 cup Tia Maria

Mix all ingredients in a large bowl over crushed ice. Serve.

Salad on 'turkey' sandwich

It's two great meals — salad and turkey sandwich in one. Isn't it amazing what people can find to put between two pieces of fresh bread. But if you like salad and sandwiches, you'll love this combination.

On one piece of bread (Preferably rye, pumpernickel or french) stack thin slices of turkey and swiss cheese. Now in a bowl mix lettuce, tomatoes, scallions, green pepper, a dash of salt and pepper. Pour our very own recipe of Italian Dressing over it. Put generous amounts of salad on the cheese and turkey and top your sandwich. You have the Turkey Salad-Sandwich. A full course lunch in one mighty handful!

Of all cooked meats, turkey is the highest in protein. It's rich in roboflavin, niacin and calcium, yet it is one of the lowest in fat. It also serves as an important source of Vitamin A and Ascorbic Acid, as well as a generous portion of myosin, meat's chief protein.

For sandwich lovers, salad lovers, most especially turkey left-over lovers, try the Turkey Salad-Sandwich. It's the best way ever to bring two great meals together!

SALAD ON A TURKEY SANDWICH

1 cup finely shredded lettuce
2 tomatoes, finely diced
3 scallions, finely chopped
1 green pepper, finely chopped
Dash of salt and pepper
½ cup Italian dressing
8 slices of bread (rye, pumpernickel, french)
Butter
8 slices cooked breast of turkey
4 slices Swiss Cheese

Combine lettuce, tomatoes, scallions, green pepper, salt and pepper in a large bowl. Pour on Italian dressing and toss well. Prepare sandwiches by using slices of your favorite bread. Spread butter on each slice. Arrange turkey and Swiss cheese on half of the slices, and generously spoon on top a generous portion of the salad. Top with another slice of buttered bread, and enjoy. Makes 4 sandwiches.

ITALIAN DRESSING

¼ wine vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon Sweet basil
1 teaspoon sugar

Combine and shake well.

Coffee cooler

Still stretching your coffee? This is a good cooler with the tang of orange added to coffee: Dissolve 1 tablespoon instant coffee and 1 tablespoon sugar in 1 tablespoon water. Stir into 2½ cups cold milk. Gradually beat milk mixture into ½ pint softened orange sherbet. The recipe yields 3½ cups.

LUNCHTIME — "Grunt," a two-week-old orphan hippopotamus, gets lunch bottle-fed to him in his pool at the Denver Zoo. Zoo-keeper Glenn Chambers fed him a special formula of evaporated milk, water and vitamins while "Grunt" grunted his satisfaction. Petina, Grunt's mother, a 3,000-pound hippo, accidentally strangled herself to death in her pen recently. Zoo director Clayton Freiheit said the youngster has "better than 50 per cent chance of making it."

Modesto adds 4th R to improve attitude

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Johnny goes to school one day and finds he doesn't have enough money for lunch. Then he sees a classmate with a wad of bills in his pocket.

Johhny should: (a) Roll his classmate. (b) Go hungry. (c) Assume the other boy would be as generous as himself in the same situation.

If Johnny answered (a) or (b), he'd have a tough time making it through the Modesto school system, where administrators have launched a program to build character as well as academic proficiency.

It's part of a novel program, "Academic Expectations and the Fourth R", aimed at re-establishing standards of competency and enforcing conduct codes. The "Fourth R" is responsibility.

"We're careful about calling it 'back to basics'," said the program's architect, Asst. Supt. Jim Enochs. "That means a lot of different things to a lot of people. Our program is not a right-wing, heavily religiously infused operation."

It originated when a random sampling of 20 per cent of the district's 110,000 residents showed a majority wanted more discipline and a greater effort toward excellence from the schools, Enochs said.

"When we laid out the plan, it was pretty clear we were leading the way," Enochs said. "If we were a major urban school district with all the accompanying problems, we could get the federal government to fund this thing for a couple million dollars."

The program includes a pilot "character education" program in four of the district's 21 elementary schools, minimum competency tests that began with ninth grade classes last fall and will extend to grades kindergarten through eight in September, and conduct codes that take effect in the second semester of the coming school year.

The character education phase of the program is aimed at promoting generosity, kindness, honesty, tolerance, productive use of time and talent, freedom of speech and the right to equal opportunity and economic security, Enochs said.

The values will be taught by putting students in hypothetical situations reinforced by stories told with art and multimedia presentations. A key part of the program will be getting parents to stress the same values in the home, Enochs said.

The minimum competency tests are supposed to ensure that each student reaches "the lowest acceptable level of attainment required for reasonable progress at the next grade level," Enochs said.

Students will be tested in math, science, English, social sciences and health in the middle of each school year. Those who fall below the national norm will begin remedial work at once, again with parents supervising "help yourself" homework programs.

The conduct codes mean students will be evaluated for citizenship as well as academic performance. High grades will be given to those who are punctual, obedient and who generally practice values developed in the character education program at the elementary school level.

Students who demonstrate outstanding citizenship will be rewarded with some form of community recognition. A student who gets a grade lower than 'C' in citizenship accountability will be denied privileges such as participating in student government, sports and work-experience programs.

"It will be in front of their noses for four years, so from the time freshmen enter, they'll have a good idea of what is expected of them," Enochs said.

Mexican jail conditions depress U.S. ambassador

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Patrick J. Lucey has described as "a very depressing experience" his visit to 60 imprisoned Americans anxious to win transfer to U. S. prisons by Christmas.

The La Mesa penitentiary east of Tijuana suffers from overcrowding not negligence or bad administration, Lucey said in ending his three-day Baja California visit during the weekend.

"Not one American prisoner complained about the way the director is running the prison," Lucey said. "I believe he is doing as good a job as anyone could possibly do under the conditions."

There are almost 2,000 prisoners jammed into a facilty built in 1956 to hold 300.

Lucey said bunks "are stacked three high and six prisoners are living in a 7-by-9-foot space that would house only one prisoner in the United States."

Another 400 sleep outside without shelter because there are not enough buildings, prison officials said Sunday.

A total of 73 citizens of the United States, including 20 women, are held in the prison.

Their morale is "reasonably good," Lucey said, describing them as more relaxed than those in Santa Marta de Acatitla in Mexico City, where he said prison conditions are much better.

The ambassador has been telling U. S. prisoners in Mexico that only passage of enabling legislation by Congress holds up the start of reciprocal transfers back to the prisoners' own country.

TV warms up those igloos

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Bush villagers up in Kipnuk, Mekoryuk and Noatak are going out less and enjoying life more now that they can watch "blood and guts and sex" in their living rooms on satellitebeamed television, a state survey has found.

"It gives us something to do on this boring island," one student said in response to the Alaska Department of Education's question: "How do you feel about having TV in the village?"

He is one of 5,000 residents of 22 villages from the Arctic Ocean south to the Alexander Archipelago who have been getting television since January, thanks to a $2 million state-supported experiment.

Dr. James Orvik, of the University of Alaska's Center for Northern Educational Research, said it appears that "meetings — the town council or school board meetings — suffer tremendously because of TV. Television creates a tremendous audience out there almost immediately."

Orvik is taking part in a study of five villages with television and five without to determine the "replacing effects" of the tube on traditional Eskimo and Indian culture.

That study and others will be used to help the state decide whether to expand satellite broadcasts to 80 additional villages.

A poll by the state Office of Telecommunications found that the most popular show now available is "The Six-Million Dollar Man," with "Charlie's Angels" not far behind, and that the most-asked-for programs include "Policewoman," "Starsky and Hutch" "SWAT" and "Kung Fu."

"Blood and guts and sex has universal appeal even in rural Alaska," said Mike Porcaro, executive director of the Alaska Public Broadcasting Commission. "Television viewers in Noatak are no less sophisticated that those in San Francisco. They want to watch TV and have their beer just like anybody else."

The poll found that among the least-liked programs were two basketball series and "Capital 77," Alaska public television's first effort at broadcasting coverage of the state legislature.

Of 350 elementary and high school pupils surveyed by the state education department, only 1 per cent said they never watched TV. Sixty-one per cent said they turned on the tube every night while 38 per cent said they watched it "sometimes."

One student even complained that people were spending too much time in front of their sets: "Sometimes it is tiresome when we want to have our outdoor fun and can't find most of our friends because they'd be watching TV."

Short walk back into 'Old West'

FAIRPLAY, Colo. (AP) — From the main street of Fairplay it's a short walk back into the Old West of mining camps, gold strikes and miners who made — and lost — quick fortunes.

Fairplay is the home of a "hands-on" Western museum whose backers — a private, nonprofit foundation — have tried to do only a minimum of repainting, restoration and fixing up.

The South Park City Museum is a collection of houses, mining equipment and artifacts from the mining towns that once flourished in this area 85 miles southwest of Denver in the Colorado Rockies.

"Rachel's Place" is a tavern whose scuffed brass rail invites you to rest your feet where miners, lawmen and prospectors may have stopped to cut the dust on a hot summer's day.

There's a deck of bent, dirty cards on one of the tables all set for the next game and the slot machine still works.

Over in the Denny home, the calendar in the kitchen still reads September, 1909. There are fire-blackened baking pans and an apron still hanging on the wall, and the cupboard holds cans of baking soda and other supplies.

Fairplay is at the intersection of U.S. Highway 285, which runs west from Denver, and Colorado Highway 91, which runs south from the transcontinental Interstate Highway 70.

The aged wooden floors of the buildings in South Park City Museum creak. There are layers of dirt and rust on an old mining drill or an ore crusher. The wind blows through the slats of a stagecoach inn that once stood on a high mountain pass, ruffling the curtains on a window.

Museum manager Carol Davis says the exhibits are designed to give the impression that the visitor is actually in a mining town and that the residents are just temporarily out of sight.

"Mostly we want the illusion of 'They're gone, they're just out in the next room,'" said Mrs. Davis.

The buildings — including many that were moved intact — and the other artifacts were all brought from mining towns that boomed in this part of Colorado from 1860 till the turn of the century.

The towns, some of which had up to 7,000 residents, supported 24-hour-a-day mines which took gold, silver, lead, zinc and other metals out of the surrounding mountains.

There never really was a "South Park City" where the museum buildings now stand along a dirt road that joins one of the few paved streets in Fairplay.

To get to the Old West, just take Front Street in Fairplay. When the pavement and the street lights end, you're there.

Prayer mats sold to Mecca

LONDON (AP) — Selling prayer mats to Mecca sounds a little like carrying coals to Newcastle, but that's what one enterprising Yorkshire firm has done.

Fabric manufacturer John Newhill, 34, said he got the idea when he learned that the civil war in Lebanon had cut off the traditional source of supply to the spiritual center of Islam in Saudi Arabia.

On hearing that, said Newhill, 34, owner of a 10-employe firm, "I copied an illustration from a book at the local library. A couple of days later half a dozen samples were on their way to Mecca."

Fringe benefits galore for nation's presidents

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — According to law, compensation for the president of the United States is $200,000 per annum. He doesn't get all, however. As is any American, the chief executive is subject to the will of the Internal Revenue Service, and allowing for income taxation Jimmy Carter receives only about $90,000 a year.

But do not weep for the leader. He has other, greater rewards. The U.S. Congress recognizes that the presidency is the most awesome office in the world, and pays its occupants accordingly. Not since Caesar's Rome, perhaps, has any nation bestowed so much in the way of perquisites as has America on its modern presidents.

To begin with, there is the White House, a 142-room monument fixed on 18.3 acres in the heart of some of the most priceless real estate in the world. Conventional wisdom has it that the grounds are worth $90 million or more, and the house, with its impeccable decor and history, is valued at not less than $60 million.

Carter is getting $2,178,000 to manage the residence this year. The money goes for everything from light bulbs to state dinners. And whatever is not covered in the budget is quietly picked up by helpful government agencies; the National Oceanic Survey, for instance, bears the cost of seeing to it the mansion isn't sinking.

The president is attended in the White House by 78 full-time employees. He has five maids, one laundress, one seamstress, one linen supervisor, two cooks, three chefs, one pantry assistant, six heavy duty housepersons, and others. As director of the help, Carter has Rex Scouten, an excop who has been chief White House usher since the 1940s.

Two cooks and three chefs? An assistant in Scouten's office says he "can't really explain the difference in their duties." He says they are vital to the kitchen, however, which is an industrious, 24-hour enterprise, capable of turning out anything from grits to gourami whenever the executive or his family has a Big Mac attack.

In addition to the servants, there is also the service personnel. The president has electricians, carpenters, plumbers and painters on his payroll. Besides this there are two dozen workmen from the National Park Service who carefully hide the security alarms on the White House grounds with azalea, rhododendron and hibiscus greenery.

The White House has a library supplied by American publishing companies. It has a projection room that features first run films. At parties in the eventide an Army, Navy or Air Force band provides orchestral background. For relaxation, the executive has a tennis court, swimming pool, sauna, masseur and putting green.

Aside from the White House, there is Camp David (Franklin Roosevelt called it Shangri-La). It is secured in the mountains of Maryland by Marine guards, and staffed by 150 other employees. Real estate observers say it is a million dollar retreat; the salaries and keep of the employees is estimated to cost another quarter million.

To get from the White House to Camp David, or from anywhere to anywhere, President Carter has 17 planes at his disposal. Herb Upton, who looks after such things, says his employer has two 707 jet passenger planes, one Jet Star executive craft, a jet cargo ship to haul his armored car, and 13 helicopters manufactured by Sikorsky.

As for that armored car, the president has two of them. They are available to him anywhere in the world. Besides these limousines, the presidential motor pool contains 31 ordinary automobiles. Upton says the size of this motor fleet has been reduced by 21 since Carter assumed office; this saves the public yearly leasing fees of $12,000.

Though bold, the vehicular cutback has not significantly reduced the cost of transporting the president. Estimates are that his air fleet is worth $50 million, and the cost of maintaining the planes and cars exceeds $1 million annually. And too, there is fuel use; some of the helicopters cost nearly $500 per hour to operate.

Finally, the president has his personal bureaucracy. He directly controls nearly 600 people, with functioning expenses of $7 million. And he has more than 1000 additional military personnel on his staff, at a cost that is known only to the Defense Department. For incidentals, President Carter receives $1 million for "Unanticipated Needs."

How much is all this worth? Estimates are that the cost of the president's hardware, including residences, is on the high side of $200 million. His official operating budget is almost $22 million. A broad guess as to related perquisites, including costs borne by other agencies, brings the total to something more than $230 million.

And, oh, this doesn't include the president's expense account. Kick-around cash for Jimmy Carter is established at $50,000 a year; it's just one more thing that makes the burden of the presidency a bit lighter.

Lee memorial

The Robert E. Lee Memorial is a historic residence, Arlington House, on a hilltop above Arlington National Cemetery. It was built by George Washington Parke Custis, grandson of Martha Washington and father of Mary Ann Randolph Custis, who married Lee in the house in 1831. The house was confiscated during the Civil War.

Baker delivers

LOS ANGELES — Dusty Baker admitted that he was surprised the San Francisco Giants chose to pitch to him in the ninth inning.

There were two outs, a runner on second and first base was open. Baker seized the opportunity to drill Randy Moffitt's first pitch into left field and bring home the winning run in a 3-2 Los Angeles Dodger victory Tuesday night.

"I thought they'd walk me," Baker said. "But I've managed to get only two hits off Moffitt in four years, so maybe the law of averages is catching up."

It never should have come to Baker in the first place. A two-out error by third baseman Bill Madlock, on a ground ball by pinch-hitter Manny Mota, should have been the third out. Instead, it let in the tying run and enabled Mota to go to second. It was then that Baker came up.

For eight innings, the game was a pitchers' battle between San Francisco's John Montefusco and Los Angeles' Burt Hooton.

Montefusco gained the edge when Derrel Thomas broke a 1-1 tie with his fifth home run of the season and second in as many games with one out in the eighth inning. Montefusco took the 2-1 lead into the ninth, but was removed when Reggie Smith led off with a single.

"I had had it," said Montefusco, finding no fault with Manager Joe Altobelli's stategy. "I must have lost 25 pounds out there."

With Moffitt on the mound, Ron Cey moved the tying run into scoring position with a sacrifice bunt. Moffitt fanned Steve Garvey for the second out. And then Mota came up.

Madlock suffered a slightly pulled hamstring muscle while chasing the ball on the grass made slick by a steady drizzle.

Reliever Lance Rautzhan, who pitched the final inning, picked up the victory.

"It's too bad we couldnt' have gotten more runs for Burt," Baker said, noting the Dodgers' dismal batting support.

In the final game of the series tonight, Dodger Don Sutton, 11-7, makes his eighth try for his 11th victory, opposing Jim Barr,11-9.

The Dodgers optioned catcher Kevin Pasley and outfielder Joe Simpson to Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League Tuesday. The two players were sent down on a 24-hour recall basis.

The move leaves the Dodgers two short of the 25-player limit. Pinch-hitter Ed Goodson will come off the disabled list Friday.

Richards ruled female by court

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Renee Richards has taken a giant stride toward her goal of competing for the women's singles title at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

State Supreme Court Justice Alfred M. Ascione issued a preliminary injunction Tuesday barring the U.S. Tennis Association, the U.S. Open Tennis Championship Committee and the Women's Tennis Association from excluding Dr. Richards, a 43-year-old transsexual, from the U.S. Open because of her inability to pass a sexchromatin test.

In a 13-page decision, Ascione held that there was "overwhelming medical evidence" that the 6-foot-2, 147-pound ophthalmologist, formerly known as Richard Raskind, "is now female."

To demand that Dr. Richards pass the Barr body test in order to be eligible to play in the Open was "grossly unfair, discriminatory and inequitable," Ascione said.

Lawyers for the USTA said they would review the decision before deciding whether to appeal. Qualifying for spots in the women's field begins next week.

"I feel ecstatic," Dr. Richards said, when told of the ruling. "I can't believe it. It's really a vindication of everything I've tried to prove in the last year. Whether I win the tournament doesn't mean anything in the long run."

Her attorney, Michael Rosen, said he had "faith in our cause, faith in Renee and most of all faith in our system of justice." He added that he was was prepared for an appeal. "If they want to be archaic and litigate it further, they can," he said.

Joe Zingale, who has signed Dr. Richards to play for the Cleveland Nets of World Team Tennis, said he hoped she would be in action for the Nets for tonight's playoff match against Boston. But Dr. Richards wasn't too excited at the prospect of playing WTT right now. "All my training has been geared towards Forest Hills," she said.

Dr. Richards underwent a sex-change operation two years ago and since then has competed against women tennis players, although not on the major women's tour. She filed suit after tournament officials demanded that she take the sex-chromatin test to prove she was a woman.

Ascione noted that in the Open's 95-year history the USTA had never before demanded any sex determination beyond "observation of primary and secondary sexual characteristics. It seems clear that defendants knowingly instituted this test for the sole purpose of preventing plaintiff from participating in the tournament."

Ascione held that the sex-chromatin test "is not and should not be the sole criterion" in determining an individual's sex. The only justification for using a sex determination test in athletic competition is to prevent fraud ... men masquerading as women, competing as women."

According to expert medical opinion cited by Ascione, Richards is medically, physically and socially a woman.

"When an individual such as plaintiff, a successful physician, a husband and father, finds it necessary for his own mental sanity to undergo a sex reassignment, the unfounded fears and misconceptions of defendants must give way to the overwhelming medical evidence that this person is now female," Ascione said.

"Most of the medical testimony indicates she is a woman, not in the sense that she gives birth but socially and physically. She can't test out as a woman in all aspects, but she is a woman."

The Barr body test has been used as a medical requirement for all female athletes at Olympic Games since 1968.

Paul Hartzell gets it together

TORONTO (AP) — Paul Hartzell feels he's finally getting his game together and it's difficult to argue with the 23-year-old righthander.

"I'm starting to have a lot more confidence and it's nice to go out there with that feeling," the California pitcher said after tossing a three-hitter in the Angels' 7-2 American League baseball victory Tuesday over the Toronto Blue Jays before a crowd of 15,424.

Hartzell was aided by a 10-hit California attack which featured a key two-run triple by Gil Flores in the sixth and solo home runs by Tony Solaita in the seventh and Bobby Bonds in the ninth.

"I've been struggling," said Hartzell, who raised his record to 6-7 and lifted the Angels to the .500 plateau in the West Division with a 58-58 mark.

"But now I feel I have the ability to be consistent every time I pitch. There's no reason why I shouldn't be."

Angels manager Dave Garcia was in full agreement with Hartzell, who now is a regular in the Angels starting rotation. He has appeared in 32 games in this his second season in the majors—14 as a starter.

"He's thrown two good games back to back now," said the Angels skipper. "It makes me feel good.

"I can see him winning six more games. He ought to win two out of every three times he pitches."

After the game's start was delayed about an hour by rain, Hartzell went to work on the Blue Jays, setting down the first 12 batters in quick order before Ron Fairly broke up the no-hit bid with his 15th home run of the season leading off the fifth.

A single in that same inning by Dave McKay and Bob Bailor's triple in the eighth were the only other hits off Hartzell, who walked three and struck out one.

Bond's sacrifice fly in the third brought home Thad Bosley with the first run of the game in the first, but the Blue Jays went ahead 2-1 in the fifth on Fairly's homer and a sacrifice fly by Doug Rader.

California took the lead for good in the seventh. Dave Chalk drew a lead-off walk from Jeff Byrd, 2-6, and Rance Mulliniks was safe on the first of two errors by first baseman Fairly. Flores then followed with his triple off the base of the centerfield fence.

Solaita hit his 10th homer to right-center in the seventh and Bonds belted his 30th in the ninth, tying him for the league leadership with Jim Rice of Boston Red Sox.

A two-run single by Bosley scored the final two California runs in the eighth. The Angels had threatened in the fifth on a pair of singles and a walk, but were unable to push anything across.

Andy Etchebarren walked to open the inning, took second on Bosley's third walk of the game, but was thrown out by center fielder Bailor attempting to score on Jerry Remy's base hit.

Bob Klein may go to Chargers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tight end Bob Klein is considering ending his retirement from the Los Angeles Rams and signing with the San Diego Chargers, a spokesman for the National Football League team said Tuesday.

He said the Chargers traded an undisclosed future draft choice to the Rams for the rights to Klein.

The 30-year-old veteran of eight seasons talked by telephone with Tommy Prothro, head coach of the Chargers. Afterward, Prothro was quoted as saying Klein now "has to decide whether he wants to play or not."

Klein is 6-foot-5 and weighs 245 pounds. He is unrelated to Eugene Klein, principal owner of the Chargers.

Storm postpones fight at Forum

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The 10-round super featherweight match between Ruben Olivares and Bobby Chacon scheduled tonight at the Forum was postponed until Saturday night because of inclement weather, a Forum spokesperson announced today.

Heavy rains that began Tuesday night are expected to continue through most of today and would make it difficult for fans to get to the Forum, the spokesperson said.

Olivares and Chacon, two hard-hitting former champions trying to make comebacks, will be meeting for the third time.

Olivares, who is 29, took away Chacon's WBC title for the fourth world crown in his illustrious career by stopping the 25-year-old San Fernando, California fighter in two rounds on June 20, 1975 at The Forum. That bout produced a record California title gate of $401,000.

Chacon has lost only three fights in his career and two of them were to Olivares. Olivares stopped him in nine rounds June 23, 1973.

Olivares, a 29-year-old from Mexico City, brings an 80-8-1 record into the match, and Chacon, 25 and from Los Angeles, is 36-3. They have a total of 105 knockouts between them, as Olivares has 72 and Chacon 33.

Bullets sign Dandridge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dandridge, a 6-foot-6, 204-pound forward with the Milwaukee Bucks last season, has signed a multiyear contract with the Washington Bullets of the National Basketball Association, General Manager Bob Ferry announced today.

Dandridge had played out his option with the Bucks last season, becoming a free agent. The Bullets compensated Milwaukee with cash for the rights to negotiate with the eight-year veteran, yielding neither players nor draft choices in the deal.

Ferry said that "Bob will take some of the scoring load off Elvin Hayes and Phil Chenier and at the same time give us good defense on the other team's scoring forward."

Dandridge ranked among the top 20 scorers in the NBA last season with a 20.8 average, hitting 47 per cent of his shots.

He has been a free agent since the end of the season and had expressed a preference to play for the Bullets because they are perennial NBA contenders and because Washington is near his Richmond, Va., home.

The deal with Washington culminated extensive negotiations between Fitzgerald and Bullets owner Abe Pollin. The Bucks originally had hoped to obtain a player—preferably veteran center Wes Unseld or Mitch Kupchak, one of the NBA's most promising young centers—from Washington.

They were not interested in draft choices because they already are one of the NBA's youngest teams and own two first-round picks in next year's draft.

They picked up three players in the first round this past June. They have signed one, center Kent Benson of Indiana, to a six-year contract, but the other two, forwards Marques Johnson of UCLA and Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee, are as yet unsigned.

The Bucks say they'll use the money they receive for Dandridge to pay the three rookies.

Dandridge, 29, was a fourthround choice in 1969 and proved one of the best bargain's in the club's nine year history. He became an instant starter, teaming with superstars Kareen Abdul-Jabbar, then known as Lew Alcindor, and Oscar Robertson to lead the Bucks to their only championship two years later.

Dandridge, 6 feet 6, has averaged 19 points per game in eight years, making the AllStar team three times. But he became disenchanted with the Bucks over the last several years, frequently squabbling with management over salary and other matters.

Dodgers honor 'Big Mac'

It'll be "Big Mac Night" at Dodger Stadium tonight, but the man the Dodgers will be honoring is anything but a hamburger.

Big Willie McCovey — all 6-4, 210 pounds of him — will be honored in ceremonies prior to the Dodgers-San Francisco Giants clash at 7:30 p.m.

It's highly unusual for the Dodgers to fete an opposing player. In fact, in their 20 seasons in Los Angeles the Dodgers have previously honored only two — Henry Aaron and Willie Mays.

Though his career has not been quite as spectacular as those of Aaron and Mays, McCovey nonetheless has still provided more than his fair share of thrills for baseball fans around the country.

Now 39 years young, McCovey is wrapping up an illustrious major league career that has spanned nearly two decades. Currently in his 19th major league season, Willie has already contributed 21 homers (through August 14) to the Giant attack and has been in the lineup nearly every day.

Willie has spent all but three of his 19 major league seasons in a San Francisco uniform, and it's been as a member of the Giants that he's done the most damage to the Dodgers.

McCovey made it to the big leagues in 1959, just one year after the Dodgers and Giants had moved to the West Coast. Since then, he has made it a common practice to be a nemesis to his team's bitter archrivals to the South.

In all, McCovey has belted 33 career homeruns against the Dodgers to rank him fourth on the Dodgers' all-time opponent homerun list. Even more impressive is the fact that 15 of those homers have come at Dodger Stadium — a mark that ranks him behind only Aaron (22) and Willie Stargell (17).

Although he has been highly successful against the Dodgers, Willie isn't particular about which team he's punishing with his big bat. To prove this point, just consider the fact that McCovey is currently the game's leading all-time homerun hitter among active players, having belted 486 round-trippers in his 19 seasons in the big time.

He has also hit 18 grand slams to rank as the National League's all-time leader in that category, and Boston's Carl Yastrzemski is the only active player in baseball today who has driven in more runs in his career than McCovey.

When McCovey finally winds up his career, he will be among the top 13 homerun hitters in baseball history, and will be among the top 28 in RBI production. In addition, he will also finish his career with over 2,000 base hits, a plateau he is certain to reach by the end of the current season.

McCovey began his major league career spectacularly by batting .354 to win Rookie of the Year honors in 1959, and he's won numerous accolades since then.

He was named as the N.L.'s Most Valuable Player and the Sporting News Player of the Year in 1969, and he has been the N.L.'s slugging percentage champion three different times. He has also been selected to play in the All-Star Game on six different occasions.

Ceremonies to honor McCovey will begin at 7 p.m. tonight. All fans in attendance will be able to exchange their ticket stub for a Big Mac at all participating McDonald's Restaurants in the Southern California area.

Harness races have new totalizer board

Harness racing returns to Hollywood Park Thursday night, and with it will come an all-new concept for informing bettors on racing payoffs.

Western Harness Racing will introduce the first totalizator board in California racing history to flash actual payoffs for $2 win tickets on each horse before the race. Heretofore, the board has only shown the odds and amounts bet.

The 79-night season has attracted some of the country's leading standardbreds. They will race on a Tuesday through Saturday basis, starting at 7:30 nightly — a 15-minute earlier post time than in previous years. The season ends Monday night, Dec. 5.

"We want to take some of the mystery out of horse racing," said Marvin Shapiro, president of Western Harness, in explaining the new tote board system.

"Old timers know, of course, that 2-to-1 odds mean a $6 payoff to a $2 bettor . . . or that a 9-to-5 horse will pay $5.60 if it wins. We think the new system will help our new fans and those who are not regulars."

Shapiro said every 30 seconds the infield tote board at Hollywood Park will flash up-to-the moment payoffs in dollars and cents amounts, based on the betting action before each race. The odds and payoffs change continuously as they reflect the amounts bet on individual horses related to total wagering up to the start of a specific race.

Tuesday and Wednesday programs will consist of nine races. Initially, Western Harness will present 10-race cards on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. Shapiro said Western Harness has adopted a strict policy of adherence to announced post times in order to complete nine-race programs within three hours.

Antonoplis wins title

PHILADELPHIA — Lea Antonoplis of Glendora and Kathy Jordan of King of Prussia, Pa., won the doubles title at the 60th U.S. Tennis Association's girls 18-and-under national championship.

Antonoplis, the Wimbleton junior champion, and Jordan defeated Try Lewis, San Pedro, and Ann Henrickson, Mahtomedi, Minn., 6-0, 6-1, in the doubles finals.

Fourteen-year-old Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills beat Jordan, 6-2, 6-0, to win the singles title Tuesday.

Lions roar about getting Hubbard

By The Associated Press

The Detroit Lions were roaring over the acquisition of running back Marv Hubbard. Howard Twilley was warning the Miami Dolphins not to give away his uniform, and the Chicago Bears were upset over the unexpected retirement of linebacker Ross Brupbacher.

Those were among the major developments Tuesday at the training camps of the 28 National Football League teams.

Detroit, acting like "Paper Lions" in recent years—they have made the playoffs only once in the past 19 seasons— were rejoicing over the signing of the rugged Hubbard to a multiyear contract.

Hubbard, obtained from Oakland after starring with the Raiders for seven years, set the Super Bowl champions' singleseason rushing record of 1,100 yards, in 1972.

Twilley, a standout pass receiver with the Dolphins for 11 years, is on Miami's injured reserve list because of an injured knee.

At his home in Tulsa, Okla., where he is recuperating, Twilley said: "I only want to come back if I can play. I don't want to act like I'm giving up, but I'd rather stay in Tulsa if I can't help the team.

"I've had a good career, a long career. It would really bother me to do anything to tarnish that."

Then, he added, "Just tell them (the Dolphins) not to give away my (jersey) number."

Brupbacher, a key player in Chicago's plans after leading NFL linebackers in interceptions with seven last year and starting 12 games after Doug Buffone was injured, stunned the Bears when he walked out of their camp.

A practicing lawyer in Louisiana, Brupbacher apparently has not fully recovered from a knee operation and was upset over being cast in a backup role with Buffone's return.

"Ross felt the knee he had surgery on in the offseason was not as strong as he wanted it," said Bears' Coach Jack Pardee. "He was second-guessing his decision to return this year.

"He felt his play was embarrassing to him and he wasn't contributing. We hope he changes his mind and returns ... He is a quality player."

Veteran wide receiver Billy Parks also walked out of the Bears' camp, apparently ending his hopes for a comeback.

In other NFL developments:

—Strong safety Ray Brown, the National Conference leader in interceptions in 1974, signed a series of one-year contracts with the Atlanta Falcons. The Falcons also placed free agent running back Sonny Orange from Southern Mississippi on waivers.

NASL Stars may leave St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Unless a commitment for adequate stadium facilities is secured within 30 days, the St. Louis Stars may move from St. Louis, the North American Soccer League club says.

"Our stadium facilities here are inadequate," Stars president Ted Martin said at a news conference Tuesday. "It's a simple as that."

The Stars, one of the two remaining charter members of the NASL, drew an average 9,111 fans to Francis Field this season, while crowds for the league averaged more than 13,000 a game, Martin said.

He said Francis Field, owned by Washington University, is too small to accomodate the increasing size of soccer crowds. In addition, he said Busch Stadium's baseball schedule has too many conflicts with the Stars' schedule to permit its use.

"We had been hopeful for several years there would be a new stadium," he said. However, the team has been unable to interest the city, county or state in building a new stadium.

Hot Phillies getting all the bounces

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies are getting all the bounces these days — even the bad ones.

Supposedly constructed to provide true bounces, the carpet at Montreal's Olympic Stadium turned up a nice kink for the National League East leaders Tuesday night.

The ball off the bat of Dave Johnson hit a seam in left field, skipped by Montreal's Del Unser, skittered to the wall and turned into a two-run triple that helped the streaking Phillies beat the Expos 7-5.

"That was unexpected," said Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark, "but I guess those are the breaks you get when you are winning."

Johnson's triple highlighted a five-run eighth inning, sending the Phillies on their way to their 13th straight victory and providing them with a 4½-game lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"No one knows how good we can be," said relief pitcher Gene Garber. "We're capable of finishing in first and that's where we'll be in first."

The Pirates dropped further behind the Phillies by dropping a 15-inning, 6-5 decision to the Chicago Cubs. In other National League action, the West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the San Francisco Giants 3-2; the Cincinnati Reds turned back the San Diego Padres 5-1; the New York Mets whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1 and the Houston Astros defeated the Atlanta Braves 4-1.

Cubs 6, Pirates 5

Chicago beat Pittsburgh as Bobby Murcer scored the winning run in the 15th inning on second baseman Rennie Stennett's throwing error.

The triumph broke a fivegame Cub losing streak and ended Pittsburgh's seven-game winning streak. Willie Hernandez, 6-4, picked up the victory in relief while Larry Demery, 5-4, was the loser.

Reds 5, Padres 1

Pete Rose and Dan Driessen each homered to back Tom Seaver's five-hit pitching and power Cincinnati over San Diego.

Seaver, 13-5, pitched his 12th complete game of the season, his seventh for the Reds, the most by any Cincinnati pitcher. Since being aquired by the New York Mets in a four-for-one blockbuster trade June 15, Seaver has a 6-2 record.

Mets 5, Cardinals 1

Steve Henderson and Doug Flynn each collected three hits to help New York whip St. Louis behind righthander Pat Zachry's seven-hitter. Henderson also scored two runs as New York blasted St. Louis pitcher Tom Underwood, Butch Metzger and Al Hrabosky for 11 hits.

Zachry, 6-12, weathered three singles and a walk that produced the St. Louis run after two were out in the first inning and went on to pitch his strongest game for the Mets since his acquisition in the Seaver deal.

"Maybe it was because I applied myself a little better or something," said Zachry about his first route-going performance for the Mets. "I don't believe I've been throwing the ball that well all year. I had to keep my mind on what I was doing."

Astros 4, Braves 1

Rob Sperring had three hits and drove in one run and two other runs scored on errors as Houston beat Atlanta. Mark Lemongello, 5-13, pitched eight innings for the Astros, scattering 10 hits and working out of a bases-loaded jam in the third after the Braves had scored their run.

The Astros scored their runs on Cesar Cedeno's RBI grounder in the first, throwing errors by shorstop Jerry Royster in the third and third baseman Barry Bonnell in the fifth and Sperring's RBI double in the eighth.

O'Brien will decide Wilkes compensation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Negotiations between the Golden State Warriors and the Los Angeles Lakers over compensation for all-star forward Jamaal Wilkes have broken down, the Warriors announced Tuesday.

The team said the matter will be decided by National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

No details of the unsuccessful negotiations were released by the Warriors. In a terse news release, the Warriors said O'Brien's decision is expected to be made no earlier than September.

Wilkes, a three-year veteran from UCLA who was the NBA Rookie of the Year in 1975.

AAU swimmers converge

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Olympians and record holders will be among the young men and women competing in the AAU National Swimming Championships beginning here Thursday.

The long course (50-meter) meet in the International Swim Complex here will determine the national championships in 30 events.

In addition, 18 men and 18 women will be chosen, based on an AAU formula, for the U.S. team to compete in dual meets against East Germany and the Soviet Union. Those meets are Aug. 27-28 in East Berlin and Sept. 3-4 in Leningrad.

NASL rookie named

NEW YORK (AP) — Defender Jim McAlister of the Seattle Sounders has been selected the North American Soccer League Rookie of the Year in a poll of players, NASL Commissioner Phil Woosnam said Tuesday.

McAlister, a native of Seattle and a graduate of junior and senior soccer programs in the area, became at 19 the youngest player ever to start for the Sounders when he opened their final game last year.

This season, he played in 21 games for the Sounders as left back and won honorable mention all-star status in the Sporting News poll.

The players poll that earned McAlister the Rookie of the Year honors also was sponsored by the Sporting News.

Ramirez overcomes lapses

TORONTO — Top-seeded Mexican Raul Ramirez overcame bad weather and lapses of concentration to defeat Alvero Betancur of Colombia 2-6, 6-4, 6-1 in a 5¼ hour first-round match at the Canadian Open tennis championship.

The Colombian, who was a qualifier for this $160,000 tournament, took advanatage of Ramirez' lapses. When the Mexican star tried to attack the net, Betancur blasted passing shots by Ramirez until the middle of the second set. Then, Ramirez concentrated on breaking down Betancur's backhand and finally won it.

In women's action, South African Brigitte Cuypers upset No. 6 seed Laura Dupont of the United States 6-2, 6-4.

Cal 500 records should fall

Auto racing

California 500 race and qualifying records, which have withstood one assault after another since 1970 and 1972, are expected to go skeltering along the 2½ mile oval course in both pre-race and race day competition this year.

With a full week of activity leading up to race day on September 4, drivers will begin zeroing in on the existing standards with the opening of practice on Sunday, August 28.

The first marks expected to fall will be Bobby Unser's one and four-lap qualifying marks set in preparation for the 1972 classic when the two-time and defending Cal 500 winner hurtled Dan Gurney's Olsonite Eagle around the course at 201.965 and 201.394 mph, making Ontario the fastest of the three Triple Crown race sites — including Indianapolis and Pocono.

A change in technical rules, which restricted manifold pressure for the next four years, was mainly responsible for the longevity of Unser's 200 mph dashes. No driver has hit the magical 200 mph barrier at OMS since, but, with a relaxation of the manifold limitations this year, several double-century laps are almost certain.

Because of the problems he has experienced thus far in the 1977 season, Unser himself is not considered a strong candidate to erase his own marks, although he is never one to be counted out. The 1974-76 California 500 winner has been winless in the 10 USAC Championship races run thus far this year but that may change at Ontario where the Albuquerque, N.M. veteran has the best overall performance record of any driver in championship racing.

In the meantime, the spotlight will be on Tom Sneva, the 29-year-old former school teacher who made racing history at Indianapolis last May by becoming the first to break the 200 mph barrier at the historic Indy plant.

Sneva and his Roger Penske-McLaren are heavily favored to win the Cal 500 pole when the first day of qualifications gets underway on Wednesday, August 31.

Other candidates include Johnny Rutherford, Al Unser, 1976 pole winner A.J. Foyt and newcomer Danny Ongais, who has shaken up the championship racing set with some startling performances this season in his Interscope Racing Parnelli.

Ongais, a Hawaiian-born product of motorcycle and drag racing, is in his first full year on the USAC Citicorp Cup circuit, after crashing at Ontario last year in his championship race debute. Last May he opened eyes at Indianapolis by turning in the fastest lap of the race, at over 190 mph late in the going, and more recently he won the 200-mile race at Michigan International Speedway and won the pole position for the Texas 200.

More than 40 entries are anticipated for the $345,000 Cal 500, including one female, 39-year-old Janet Guthrie who made history at Indianapolis this year by becoming the first female to qualify for the 500. If she qualifies at Ontario it will be another first for the popular driver who missed in her attempt to make the 1976 race.

This year's classic has an additional important aspect in that it probably will decide this year's National Championship. Last of the three 500-milers on the schedule, the Cal 500 pays handsomely in points counting toward the coveted title which means the winner and top ten finishers will gain considerably.

After 10 races, the points chase was being led by Sneva who held a 1000 advantage over Rutherford. Defending champion Johncock was third with Foyt fourth and Dallenbach fifth.

Following three days of practice, on August 28-30, there will be two days of qualifying (August 31-September 1) setting the 33-car field for the 11 a.m. start on race day, September 4.

McKnight battles Cook for leadership

IRWINDALE — Danny McKnight of Alta Loma and Roy Cook, Jr., of Redlands will continue their quest for the top spot in the RIMCO Midget Series at Speedway 605 Saturday night.

The pair traded main event victories in the first two races of the series and Cook heads the point list over McKnight, 103 to 101.

The Alta Loma driver, however, still leads the United States Racing Club season standings with a 149-point margin over Cook.

McKnight, in his RIMCO Miller Volkswagen, and Cook, in his Wright VW, are vying for $2,000 in point money.

The midgets will compete on the half-mile track Saturday. Qualifying runs begin at 6:30 p.m. with the first trophy dash set for 7:30 p.m. The 30-lap midget main event tops the card.

Yarborough out in front

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough has regained first place in the Grand National points race of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR).

Yarborough's second-place finish in the Talladega 500 Sunday pushed him ahead of Richard Petty, who placed 11th.

With 11 races remaining on the Grand National schedule this year, Yarborough has 3,125 points and Petty has 3,093.

Benny Parsons is third with 2,819 and Darrell Watrip fourth with 2,772. Although Waltrip drove the winning car, in relief of heat-fatigued Donnie Allison, all the points and the victory credit go to Allison as the starting driver.

'Husker QB spot unsettled

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska's main football questions of the approaching autumn concern who will emerge from a quintet of quarterback candidates and how well that top signal-caller will fare.

"The quarterback thing is probably going to be a trial and error situation," Coach Tom Osborne said. "I wouldn't be at all surprised if the starter the first game isn't the starter at the end of the season."

ONE OF A SERIES

Osborne doesn't have a lot of breathing space on the schedule to make the right choice from among Randy Garcia, Tom Sorley, Ed Burns, Tim Hager and Jeff Quinn.

After a Sept. 10 home opener against Washington State, the Cornhuskers entertain Bear Bryant's Alabama team the second game.

Osborne said the schedule, which also lists Baylor, Indiana, Kansas State, Iowa State, Colorado, Oklahoma State, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, includes eight potential top 20 teams in the national rankings.

Garcia may have the inside track for quarterback, as he was the 1976 backup to Vince Ferragamo. Ferragamo led Nebraska to a 9-3-1 record with a 27-24 Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl win over tough Texas Tech.

Garcia's four-of-17 statistics in the passing department in 1976, plus 78 yards rushing in 24 carries, provides a shortage of game data on which to judge his potential. But the other quarterback candidates have even less game experience.

Returning running backs include Rick Berns, last year's leader with 972 yards, and veterans Monte Anthony and Dodie Donnell.

Donnell gained 520 yards last season and Anthony has a three-year total of 2,112 yards, despite injury problems.

"We felt last year that overall we were not at the top of the (Big Eight) conference when it came to running backs," Osborne said. "But we think that has changed and we are much improved."

Despite the question-mark at quarterback and the solid running corps, Osborne has yet to say whether he is looking toward the aerial or ground game as the key this fall.

"We may come out one game and look like Ohio State and only throw the ball five times," he said. "The next week we might look like Stanford or California and throw a lot."

The Huskers are working on replacements for top receivers such as Dave Shamblin, Chuck Malito and Bobby Thomas and defensive stars such as tackles Mike Fultz and Ron Pruitt.

The new defensive coach hired from Kansas, Lance Van Zandt, says that latter search is tough, but he sees potential and some depth.

"It's hard to replace kids like Fultz and Pruitt and (Dave) Butterfield," he said.

"We think we'll be a good team and we haven't changed our goals," he said. "But we must fill a lot of gaps left by departing stars and work hard to become a fine team."

Montgomery Ward warrants each of its passenger car tires for a specified number of miles when used on passenger cars or station wagons (except taxis). If your tire does not give you this mileage because of (1) failure due to defects in materials or workmanship, or (2) premature tread wearout (2/32 inches or less remaining), unless due to misalignment, Montgomery Ward will:

During the first 25% of warranted miles, replace the tire free of charge.

After the expiration of the 25% of the warranted mileage to the end of the warranted mileage, replace the tire charging only a prorated amount based on the mileage used to the total mileage warranted and the selling price in effect at the time of return at the branch to which returned, plus total federal excise tax on the replacement tire.

Passenger tires used on taxis or vehicles other than passenger cars or station wagons are warranted on the same basis against defects in materials and workmanship only.

For warranty service return tire with warranty form issued at time of sale of tire to any Montgomery Ward branch.

Sparky happy to negotiate

Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, recently rehired to manage the Reds through 1979, was kidded about the likelihood of his demanding renegotiation in the middle of a new contract, as some players do.

"Are you kidding?" says Anderson. "I'm happy just to negotiate."

'Carousel'

Gallery does R-H musical

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

Love is bustin' out all over the Gallery Theater in Ontario where Rodgers and Hammerstein's sentimental musical, "Carousel," bowed before an appreciative audience last weekend.

Given facile direction by Mark Shipley, imaginative musical direction by Duane Thomas and interesting choreography by Karen Craft and Karmen Roberts, the young cast romps engagingly through the Down East soap opera, making the most of the comedy as well as the melodrama.

Cathy Greenwood, who resembles a young Kay Francis, is winsome as the long-suffering Julie and displays a pleasant soprano in "If I Loved You" and other songs. Ted Soto's Billy Bigelow lacks some of of the swagger required of the role, but it is a persuasive performance.

Pat Mallicoat as Carrie is pert and funny, delightful in "Mr. Snow" and "When the Children Are Alseep." Paul Vender Heyden is something of a stick as Mr. Snow but lends a pleasing baritone to "When the Children Are Asleep" and "Geraniums." Letty Dunning, needing a little more mature makeup, is solid as Mrs. Mull; Tyler Learned offers a swashbuckling Jigger, and Debbie Whitman is an enchanting Louise. Doug Dowd gives one of his customary convincing characterizations as the Starkeeper.

The musical is studded with such memorable tunes as "Carousel Waltz," "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," "Blow High, Blow Low," "What's the Use of Wonderin'?" and "You'll Never Walk Alone."

"Carousel" plays at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays for several weekends. The theater is at C Street and Lemon Avenue.

'Love, Honor and Dismay'

Elizabeth's story gets mixed reaction

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — When Elizabeth was 20, and married to Richard Harris, her parents, as a birthday present, took the young couple to see a play. It was "My Fair Lady," with Rex Harrison. Years later, Elizabeth divorced Richard and became Mrs. Rex Harrison.

The attractive blonde, now divorced again, tells the story of her marriages to two of the most attractive Englishmen in a new book called "Love, Honor and Dismay." Don't expect too much in the way of inside information; Elizabeth Harrison has written a book that is light and frothy, but hardly sensational.

You might be interested in the reactions of her three sons, who are all also Richard Harris' sons.

Damian, 18, who plans to be a director: "It wasn't as bad as I thought it was going to be."

Jared, 16, planning on becoming a lawyer: "It was rather sad."

Jamie, 14, who may become an actor: "I've already read a book this year, do I have to?"

And you might also be interested in the reactions of the two ex-husbands. Elizabeth says that Richard read it and told her they should have collaborated on it. If they had, he said, maybe it could have been sold to the movies.

ANNE ARCHER

"He said he liked the early part best," she says, "but I'm not sure what that meant."

(The early part is more sympathetic, a love story, a story of Richard's early struggles and the beginnings of his triumphs.)

As to Rex — "He told me he hasn't read it and I'm sure that's true, because if he had read it, he would have said so."

The exceptionally beautiful Anne Archer is more and more becoming recognized as a leading contender for stardom. In the old days, when beauty was big in Hollywood, she would have zoomed to the top. But, as it is today, the struggle has been slower.

Now she has a good part, the feminine lead opposite karate champ Chuck Norris in "Good Guys Wear Black." It is, she believes, a major step onward.

As you probably know, Anne is the daughter of Marjorie Lord, a pretty attractive lady in her own right. As a child, Anne says, she was shy and never gave acting much of a thought. It wasn't until she was in college — Claremont — that she really began acting.

She says her mother never encouraged her nor discouraged her, "but I think she was happy with my decision."

As so often happens, the first time Anne met her "Good Guys Wear Black" co-star, Chuck Norris, was on the set and immediately they had a scene together.

"But it wasn't a tough scene, fortunately," she says. "I've been in situations where I met someone and, right away, had a big love scene with him.

Local youth group to present musical, 'West Side Story'

Foothill Productions, county-sponsored musical theater company, will present "West Side Story" in the Dailey Theater at La Verne College at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday and Aug. 25-27. Tickets are $2.50 for adults, $1 for children.

Arthur Laurents wrote the book and Leonard Bernstein and Stephen Sondheim the songs. The story tells of two rival gangs, the Sharks and the Jets, battling for their turf on New York City's grubby west side. Tony, founder of the Jets, and Maria, sister to the leader of the Sharks, find in each other the love they have been searching for, only to have tragedy strike.

"West Side Story" is directed by Ross Clark and Choreographed by Bruce Keller, assisted by Jan Nogueroles. Steve Engle provides choral direction, and Gabe Petrocelli handles the orchestral direction. Jack Betts is stage manager and technical director.

Lee Lucas plays Tony and Elizabeth Biggs is Maria. Other leading roles are taken by Renee Long, Anita; Angel Nogueroles, Bernardo; John Cavazos, Riff; Tony Sifuentes, Chino, and Patrick England as Officer Krupke.

Others in the cast are Leticia Sierra, Morgan Rusler, Jacqueline Nagey, Yvette Anderson, Nancy Birkinshaw, Karen Lewis, Lori Castellano, Leroy Jones, Mark Bridges, David Huffman, Chris Biggs, Dan Solis, Joe Vitale, Lisa Rucker, Charlie Harris, Laura Lilley, Tracy Waterlyn, Joann Cammarata, Julie Garciolett, Denise Drayster, Debbie Drayster, Jennifer Keefer, Gig Mark, Laura Allen, Jesse Shelby, Nancy Peters, Susan Gilson, Carolyn Tomes, Rose Tressel, Scott Alexander and Ron Sturtevant.

The recreation departments of Pomona, La Verne and San Dimas are associated with Los Angeles County in the production.

Vereen was Chicken George on "Roots" and starred in an NBC summer variety series two years ago. He won a Broadway Tony award for best actor in a musical for "Pippin."

Finalists for Miss Black America were selected in regional competitions. Twanna Kilgore, the reigning Miss Black America, will participate in the crowning ceremony.

Band group plans picnic

The Friends of the Pomona Concert Band will hold its annual "corn feed" in the picnic area adjacent to the Ganesha bandshell at 6 p.m. Thursday.

Members will serve corn-on-the-cob, several kinds of homemade pie, and punch and coffee. The public is invited to bring picnic suppers. Further information can be obtained from Dorothy Hawk, chairman of the supper, at 599-2624.

Conductor Stan Selby will lead the Pomona Concert Band in a free concert at 8 p.m.

The Friends still has a few seats left for the annual trip to the Hollywood Bowl Aug. 27. Buses will leave the main gate at the county fairgrounds at 5 p.m. A picnic supper in the Bowl will be followed by a pops concert by Zubin Mehta, with violinist Itzhak Perlman as soloist. Tickets at $7.50 include bus ride, picnic supper and a seat at the concert.

More than 100 nations

Radio parley set for 1979

By INK DIPPER

More than 100 countries will meet in Geneva, Switzerland, in late 1979 to discuss their radio spectrum requirements. This is the first such conference to be held in 20 years, and there won't be another one until the year 2000.

Why is it important?

The FCC will present policies involving CB (land mobile) and ham (amateur radio) which have been established in the United States. In order to completely document their position, the FCC has been sending out notices of inquiry which request comments from the public and various spectrum users. The Fifth Notice has just been released and asks for users to file statements regarding their needs.

By the time this conference takes place, there will probably be a lot of changes already in effect in this country. It looks to this writer as though we will already have moved into the 900 MHz area which should open up about 400 channels for CBers and increase the use of personal radio considerably. This is in the UHF range, which should make personal radio secure from the sun spot dilemma. It will also expand the methods of usage considerably. Radio hobbyists will find great excitement in this new stage should it come about.

There is enough evidence now available to indicate that the FCC will take this step within the next 12 months. And, additionally, this could be the forerunner of slitting the 40 channels we now have on our CB units into only single sideband, which would be a great improvement. This would afford all of us greater power without increasing the wattage and do away with the inefficient AM mode.

More than 1.5 million CB units have been sold in Europe. Power limitations there are much more severe than those imposed upon us. West Germany, for example, limits power to one-half watt in base stations. Similar restrictions exist in Sweden, France and Italy. Most of the CBers there use "afterburners" to achieve 5 watts. That's how DXing will be possible with foreign CBers.

CBing is quite popular in Europe now, and growing fast. Even in Belgium, where use of CB is restricted to police, fire departments and taxis, there are bootleg sets in private cars. The point of all this is that the growth of Land Mobile is so dynamic it will have to represent an important place on the agenda at the World Radio Conference. Certainly the free world's public interest must be properly served by making as much space available for public use as possible. Right now it would appear that the United States and Canada are way ahead of most countries.

In view of this it might be well if the FCC and the Canadian Department of Communications worked together to make their presentation of spectrum needs at the World Radio Conference. Assuredly CB's growth and the allocation patterns established in the United States and Canada will serve as proper guides for other countries as CB takes off there — as it certainly will.

'Hair' film is upcoming

NEW YORK (AP) — United Artists has announced the upcoming filming of "Hair," one of the most popular musicals of the 1960s, under the direction of Academy Award-winning director Milos Forman.

Filming of the musical by Jerome Ragni, James Rado and Galt MacDermot will be on various Midwestern and New York locations. The screenplay for the film was written by Michael Weller.

"Hair" opened on April 29, 1968, at the Biltmore Theater and continued its smash Broadway run through July 1972. Nineteen companies produced the musical around the world. There were a total of 2,000 recordings, both albums and singles, made of "Hair," with sales of more than 30 million copies.

East-west TV feud settled; Emmy show slated Sept. 11

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — We hate to sadden award-show haters, but it seems there really will be a 29th annual Emmy awards show for evening programs after all — on NBC's "Big Event" next Sept. 11.

You'll recall this tuxedo rally once was set for May 15, but fell apart amid feuding by the New York and Los Angeles chapters of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

The feud got so bad that TV stars here defected from the show by the gross. This raised the grave prospect that almost no one in nighttime TV would get an Emmy award this year. Unthinkable.

So in July they agreed on two separate Emmy tribes. The new Academy of Television Arts and Sciences here got custody of all evening Emmyizing. The Gotham gang got daytime and sports to salute.

ATAS, as the evening shift is called, issued its roster of nominations last week. The roster was impressive. It was more than a quarter-inch thick and weighed 11 ounces.

It contained 66 categories of nominations, compared to a parsinomious 18 for last April's rousing "Television Critics' Circle Awards" festival on CBS. ATAS does not mess around.

Fortunately, only the major categories — acting, writing, directing and showing up for last year's Emmys — will be announced on the air.

The roster also showed 594 names eligible for Emmys. This doesn't mean 594 folks were nominated, though. Many contenders were nominated for more than one show or in more than one category.

For example, public TV's Jac Venza is a five-count contender as executive producer of four efforts from "The Adams Chronicles" to "Arthur Rubenstein at 90," and for designing the scenery of the "Billy the Kid" episode of "American Ballet Theater."

Should he go home without an Emmy, you may expect the sun to rise in the West. And it is a safe bet anyone even remotely connected to ABC's "Roots" will get a statuette to take home.

That eight-part proceedings, a ratings hit last January, swept last week's nominations, getting 37 for individual and collective effort.

The sweep was so clean four "Roots" thespians were nominated in the category, "Outstanding Lead Actor for a Single Appearance in a Drama or Comedy Series." No one from any other show qualified here.

This seems unfair. Honorable mention at least should go to the outstanding lead actors appearing in any one of the three glittering New York parties NBC aired last Sept. 26.

Depending on your point of view, the parties easily qualified as dramas or comedies, and dragged on so long you could call them a series. They, ah, also came in last in the ratings that week.

Even with the glittering Emmy party, will the "Big Event" repeat history as it opens its second season the night of Sept. 11?

King Tut exhibit packed 'em in CHICAGO (AP) — Just as the last priest to leave the tomb of King Tutankhamun 3,000 years ago swept away all footprints from the sand, the last person to visit Tut's exhibit here took a willow broom and swept the entrance symbolically.

More than 1.35 million persons came to the Field Museum to see the dazzling gold mask of Egypt's boy king during its four-month stay here.

The Tut exhibit, which already has been on display in Washington, now continues its 2½-year tour of American cities. It opens Sept. 15 at the New Orleans Museum of Art for four months. Other stops are the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, the Seattle Museum of Art and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

The exhibit of 55 ancient artifacts from the land of the pharoahs packed the Field Museum every day, with the wait to get inside averaging 6½ hours.

Hundreds of people with sleeping bags and blankets would appear on the steps each midnight to await the opening of the doors in the morning.

Lines snaked around the outside of the museum as 10,000 to 12,000 persons a day filed past items of precious gold, inlaid wood and intricate ivory. Thousands were turned away for lack of space in the 15,000-square-foot exhibition hall.

Conductor wins award

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Sadelsky, a young conductor, has been named the fourth recipient of the Julius Rudel Award and will work with the New York City Opera during its 1977-78 season, opera officials have announced.

Sadelsky graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Indiana University in 1973 and studied at the Juilliard School of Music in New York and the Accademia Chigiana in Sienna, Italy. He is also music director and conductor of Musique a la Mode and the Bouffes Parisiens of New York.

The award was created in 1969 on the occasion of the New York City Opera's 25th anniversary in recognition of Rudel's service as the company's director since 1957.
